BLACK AND MOURNING GOODS.
Style, Quality and Price.

These are the three prime factors in the dry goods business. We can truthfully say: Our styles are the latest; in quality; nothing but the best can be found here, and our prices are the lowest in the state. An investigation of our mammoth stock will convince you that everything is just as represented and you won't find us "just out" of bargains; but plenty of every number and just as advertised. No humbug to catch the crowd, but honest and solid facts.

EMBROIDERIES!
We are now getting into the season for light summer fabrics, the hot weather last week reminded one of white dresses. In a very few weeks Atlanta's female population will be decked out in white embroidered suits, and we may look forward to VISIONS OF GRANDEUR for the embroideries of this season's manufacture are the daintiest and prettiest things that have ever been made for the adornment of woman. Our grand assortment of Embroideries for the coming season is now in the house. They were selected with the greatest of care and lots of time and pains was spent on this collection. We import our own embroideries direct from St. Gall, Switzerland, and consequently are enabled to undersell those who have to purchase their stock from the importers of New York. We now have all the novel effects that the manufacturers' skill has devised in this line for this spring and you may rest assured that if you come to us for your embroideries you will get the latest designs and effects that have been imported. To pass us by would only be an injustice to yourself. In skirting embroideries our enormous collection embraces every kind and every price from the very cheapest, say 25c yard to the very handsomest. In misses' and children's skirting embroideries we are fixed, we have a tremendous lot of those delicate sweet patterns that in former years only the wealthy could buy. This season the prices are reduced and we can suit the poor and rich alike. Before leaving this important stock we must mention a special job in Hamburg Embroideries, both edgings and insertings which we will offer tomorrow at 8 1/2c yard. Come and see them, you will be repaid.

Linens.
We wrote at length on our Linen bargains last week, and our customers responded nobly. We gave some specially good values in towels and table Linens. A few boxes of Linen goods of various kinds received the last of the past week has just sorted up our stock and again put it in perfect shape. This shipment contained several "good things," and we can promise our patrons a few Linen bargains the coming week that in point of good value and real unadulterated bargains have never been surpassed by us in our many efforts to tempt the people of this city by cheap goods. In the short limits of a newspaper column we can only cite a few of the "Specials." Don't judge the department from the few things we here mention. The stock is full of desirable goods at quite reasonable prices.

230 dozen Huck Towels, 42 inches long and 21 inches wide, fine quality and pure Linen. For wear and tear there is not a better Towel made. Either hemmed or fringed, only 15c apiece tomorrow. In a regular way they are worth just a quarter of a dollar.

162 dozen of fine Satin Damask Towels, with knotted fringe and very handsome woven borders in new colorings. They are large size and the designs are beautiful. Tomorrow morning we will sell them at 25c each, and it is no exaggeration to say that the same quality cannot be bought less than 50c.

Another big lot of the crash for towels, full 16 inches wide. Last week we sold it at 3 1/2c, but this last shipment will be offered tomorrow at 2 1/2c yard.

A FAKIR ON THE ROAD.

REIDSVILLE, N. C., April 19.—[Special.]—The study of human nature has always been one of my principal "hobbies," and never to my knowledge have I allowed a chance of learning how the different classes of people whom we fall in with daily live, slip by.

Last evening it was my luck to fall in with Jack Clinton, a gay and festive spirit, and general all-round confidence worker, and gentleman to boot, the coming day would be far advanced before I finished, so I will simply give you a few brief sketches of a year back.

"It's about a year ago now that I lit into Rochester, N. Y., with an old partner of mine, Tommy Parsons; ready to do anything in our particular line by which we could turn a dollar. But I had been about two weeks without doing anything, when I found a hotel for sale, at a moderate price and easy monthly payments.

"Parsons and I visited the proprietor, and after showing an abundant supply of recommendations and giving numerous references, we struck a bargain and at once took possession.

"How did I get the recommendations? Why, that's the easiest part of our business. We always have a town where we can go back to; a town where our credit is unlimited and our morals rated high. These towns we always do square by till we get another town fine, and then we work it for all it's worth. Why, I attended church twice a day and taught a class in Sunday school for six months in a little town up north to make my credit solid, and have got in my pocket now recommendations from the pastor of that church and a member of the local legislature.

"But to go back, we held on to the hotel for nearly one month, took in over eight hundred apiece and jumped to Syracuse. In less than a week's time we were both out of cash and a boarding house. Parsons, however, became necessary to raise a few dollars for a starter—and anybody who knows Syracuse knows what a 'rocky' place it is to 'hustle' cart-wheels in. There was only one opening for us, and we took it—the canal. Both Parsons and myself struck a job driving mules on two canal boats. Sick and disgusted, I started along the towpath, behind a team of the nearest mules that I could get my hands on, and in striking propensities, for Buffalo. But the trip to Buffalo was nothing to what it was from there back to Albany. Eight hours on and eight hours off, accompanied by rain and mud in no small degree. At Rome I drove one of the mules into the canal, where I had the satisfaction of seeing him drown. He was valued at, so the skipper said, four hundred dollars. Parsons would not let me mule were he worth twice that money.

"When Albany was reached a month had slipped by, and I possessed a pair of soleless shoes, a has-been-a-good-one suit of clothes and twenty dollars. Albany was, however, a good town to make a 'stake,' and having purchased a nickel's worth of English walnuts, and a piece of beeswax, I started down along the lumber docks to work a 'sucker' for his dust. Three days after that I lit out of Albany with a good suit of clothes and over fifty dollars in money. At Catskill Parsons got killed."

Here the narrator's voice grew husky, and turning from me to wipe away a tear, he continued:

"We were standing at the station waiting to jump on the blind baggage of a passenger that stood there. I stood at the upper end of the platform, and Parsons stood opposite me on the track, about five feet ahead of the engine. The train started up and when Parsons tried to get off the track, he found that he could not extricate one of his feet. I tried to signal the engineer to stop, but it was too late. Poor devil. It did not kill him outright, but mangled him terribly.

"We carried him into the freight house and somebody called in a minister but he went over the divide as he had lived. When asked by the minister if he did not wish to sail through the golden portals with the traditional palm leaf, he said no, and expressed a desire to take a drop to that waterless garden of brimstone and Lewis Morrison, telling the surprised minister: 'You see, old man, if I strayed through the golden gates I would find myself friendless, and down below—well, I know all the gang there.'

"Poor Tommy, he was the best and only real pard I ever had."

"A few days after that the Johnstown disaster occurred, and I immediately doubled up with a faked by the name of Schnack, and secured a panorama of the flood. We run this racket up till September, when we broke ranks in Hudson, N. Y. At that time we found this remunerative, but finally too many of them got on the road. I then worked the fair up along the Hudson as far as New York.

"I got into New York with a good boodle, but poker and faro bank again reduced me to a state of bankruptcy, and I once more started out. I left New York on a Saturday, pulled a few dollars out of Jersey City, and landed in Princeton, N. J., on the opening day of the college there. Many a poor fellow went broke the next day. Many of the students found that experience could not be learned at college. In three days I took one hundred and fifty dollars out of Princeton, outside of my 'plunger's' divide.

"I will here state that a 'plunger' is a man who 'caps' for you on the outside. That is, he has a buggy, a horse, a watch, or whatever it may be, to sell, takes you down to look at it and steers you into whatever game his 'grafter' is working.

"I got into Philadelphia a few days after leaving Princeton, but found business very poor, so I left the same day for Baltimore. At Chester, about nine miles out of Philadelphia, I had my first real experience with 'hobcans,' or tramps. There I heard that about two miles further down a gang of section men would get paid off, so started off to pick up a few 'honest' dollars. When about half way there I was overtaken by a rain storm, and I crawled into a neighboring lumber barn for shelter. I had probably been there for an hour, when I was pulled about twenty fums, accompanied by their 'kids.' Among the delegation were Tongue-Tied Sam, Hoboken Bill, Red Mike, Crooked-Nose Mike, Angel Joe, and several others of no repute. I found them a jolly lot, though, and would that I had the time to tell you a few of the yarns, both humorous and pathetic, that went the rounds that night.

"The next morning I struck out for Baltimore, and perhaps no sucker was ever played in a neater manner than I was in this afore-said town.

"I got out of a freight car at the yards at Baltimore, and there I met a plunger of whiskey and a man. It is quite unnecessary for me to say which I recognized first. At all events I took a few drinks and remembered no more till I awoke to find myself on a cypress. I interviewed the captain, was shown the articles that I had signed, and also where I was charged with a couple of dollars."

worth of oleikins, a pint of whiskey and five dollars advance money. All of which I had received from a shipping agent by the name of Murphy. Somebody must have got the benefit of not only that five dollars advance money, but several more dollars that I had in my pocket, together with the oleikins and pint of whiskey.

"I stayed down the bay seven long days in which time I managed to break a finger, fall overboard, get knocked in the head with a piece of wood by the captain and sprained both of my wrists.

"On the morning of the eighth day I arose very early, quietly went down to the stern of the vessel, unfasted, the yard boat made for the shore, and I'll wager what few possessions I have in this world that Lord Llewellyn's daughter's ride was not a whit more exciting than mine.

"I managed, however, to reach Oxford in safety, where I sold the yawl boat for seven dollars. I took a boat from there to Baltimore and when I arrived in that city went down on Pratt street to see Mr. Murphy, the gentleman who 'shanghaied' me down the bay. I again shipped with him for deep water, as an A. B., and received forty dollars advance money. I have not seen Murphy since, neither has Murphy seen his forty 'simoleons.' Thus does one-half of the world prey upon the other.

"At Richmond I fell in with Billy Curtis, Hank Hutchins, Cocky Cruet, Kid Whitmore and several other shell workers and street fakirs.

"Our journey was an uneventful one, till we reached Beauford, N. C. Here we stopped to take in a fish fair, and all of the above mentioned people but Curtis were run in. Hutchins received ten years and the rest from two up to five years apiece. I've been mighty 'leary' since, and about the only work I've done since then was in Macon, where I managed to pick up a snide six dollars.

"But, never mind, fence corners will soon be ripe up north, and then I'll get in my work again.

"Just then a country-looking fellow, a little under the influence, walked into the saloon where we were sitting and displayed quite a roll of bills when he paid for his drink.

"Turning to me with a kind of 'he-my-meat' wink, the faked got up and followed him out, leaving me to ponder over the truthfulness of the old saying, 'One half of the world don't know how the other half lives.'"

IRON AND KAOLIN.

THE DISCOVERY OF MINERAL DEPOSITS.

Stewart County's Natural Wealth Becomes Tangible—Iron in Abundance—The Kaolin Deposits.

LUMPKIN, Ga., April 19.—[Special.]—The corps which is surveying the route of the new railroad from here to some point on the Columbus Southern found about five miles from here yesterday an almost inexhaustible bed of something which looked like phosphate rock. It was brought to town and submitted to an experienced geologist who pronounced it phosphate beyond question.

A BED OF KAOLIN DISCOVERED.

On further where it is expected to tap the Columbus Southern, an immense bed of kaolin has been discovered which is ten or twelve feet in thickness and runs for several hundred feet through a range of hills. It is perfectly white and feels like flour. Also a considerable deposit of iron ore was found near the kaolin, and Mr. Pearson, on whose land is both the kaolin and iron, gathered up some of the rocks and sent them to the state chemist, who reports that after careful analysis he finds in them 54 per cent. of pure iron.

THE EXCAVATION OF THE FIND.

Mr. Pearson dug down several feet and found the strata all the way and it extends across seven lots of land. Along the same survey about two miles from town are three springs which furnish a large quantity of as fine chalybeate water as there is anywhere.

King of Medicines

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Read What It Did for a Young Man in Kendallville, Indiana

It is not exaggeration to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla does possess curative power peculiar to itself, and vastly superior to other medicines. It is only stating the simple fact.

THIS IS PROVEN BY THE EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA IN A YOUNG MAN IN KENDALLVILLE, INDIANA.

For scrofula in every form, and all the diseases or affections arising from impure blood, Hood's Sarsaparilla, if given

MAY BE RELIED UPON TO EFFECT THE DESIRED RESULT. We commend to your reading the following frank statement, freely sent us by a well known and respected man of Kendallville, Ind.:

"When I was 17 years of age, I was confined to my bed for several months by an attack of rheumatism, and when I had partially recovered I did not have the use of my legs, so that I had to go on crutches. About a year or so later, scrofula, in the form of

WHITE SWELLINGS, appeared on various parts of my body, and for eleven years I was an invalid, being confined to my bed about six years. In that time ten or eleven of these sores appeared and broke, causing me great pain and suffering. Several times pieces of bone worked out of the sores. Father did everything possible to secure relief for me, consulting physicians here at home and from elsewhere. None succeeded, and I became discouraged and hated the sight of a doctor, because they always frightened me when they said they would have to scrape the bone, or probe or cut out the sores. I feared

I NEVER SHOULD GET WELL, and was disappointed because all this time I was such a burden to my parents.

"In the spring of 1881 I went to Chicago to visit a sister as it was thought a change of air and scene might do me good. But I was confined to my bed most of the time I was there. In July there was placed in my hands a little book entitled 'A Day with a Circus,' in which I found statements of cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was so impressed with the success of this medicine in cases similar to mine that I decided to try it. So a bottle was bought, and to my great gratification the sores soon decreased, and I

BEGAN TO FEEL BETTER.

This strengthened my faith in the medicine, and in a short time I was up and out of doors. To make a long story short, I continued to take Hood's Sarsaparilla according to directions, for about a year, when, having used six bottles, I had become so fully released from the chains of disease that I began to look for work. I secured a position with the Flint & Walling Mfg. Co., on Sept. 5, 1887, and since that time

HAVE NOT LOST A SINGLE DAY

on account of sickness. I believe the disease is nearly or quite expelled from my system, I always feel well, am in good spirits and have a good appetite. I always have Hood's Sarsaparilla in the house, and occasionally take a little to keep my system in order, for I regard it my constant friend. I am now 27 years of age and can walk as well as any one, except that one limb is a little shorter than the other, owing to loss of bone and the sores formerly on my right leg. I can fully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it has been a great blessing to me, and to my friends my recovery seems ALMOST MIRACULOUS.

I still keep as a memento the little book, 'A Day with the Circus,' which led me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the lion's head on the cover suggests to me that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the king of all medicines."

WILLIAM A. LEHR, No. 9 North Railroad Street, Kendallville, Ind.

What More is Necessary?

Surely, after reading the above, not even the most skeptical can doubt the peculiar power of Hood's Sarsaparilla in purifying the blood, driving out disease, and imparting health and vigor. "The greater includes the less," and if Hood's Sarsaparilla will accomplish such a cure as this, it will certainly cure other cases of scrofula, salt rheum, and all diseases or affections arising from impure or poisonous state of the blood. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

APRIL'S PHILOSOPHY.

There is another crisis on hand in our domestic affairs. The maternal ancestor is going away, and I don't know what will become of us. When one of the children misses a meal or stays somewhere all night, it is bad enough; but when the head of the house, the regulator, the director general, is gone, it looks like we had just as well shut up and go to the hotel. Who will strain the milk and look after the milk pails and see to the churning? Who will give out the supplies to the cook, and feed the chickens and get the children up in time for breakfast? Who will find their umbrellas and rubbers and gossamers when it rains? Who will look after the washing and sew on the missing buttons and take care of the dog and the cat and the kittens? Who will decide as all round and keep things lively? But she is going—that is, if I will fix her up; for she has nothing to wear and no trunk to put it in. "If I go to America," said she, "you must fix me up nice. You have made me so notorious that folks will expect to see a very extraordinary woman, and if I have to play circus you must fix me up."

Of course I will. She went over to Rome last week to see a brand-new grand-child and it was just the sweetest and prettiest little thing in the world and had the brightest eyes and the blackest hair and the tiniest little feet and hands, and she was so glad it was a girl, and so forth and so on. And now she is going on a long journey to see another one, and it takes all hands to fix her. She makes me buy her dresses. She always did, for she knows that I will buy finer goods than she does. The day before yesterday sequence, when I am fixing her up, for she takes care of her things. She always did. The girls will spoil a new dress in a moment, if there is a pin or a fork or a nail in it. They break up parasols and fans, and lose gloves and handkerchiefs and gossamers, but their maternal ancestor never loses anything. She says they take all their destructiveness from her. I see them searching through the bottom of their mother's trunk sometimes, when she is away. They are hunting for something nice that she has hidden away. Yesterday she wanted a clean, linen buggy robe and found it hid out, and they used it and got back from the ride just in time to slip it back again, and they made Carl promise not to tell. They steal her collar and handkerchiefs, and hairpins and collars, and cuffs and stockings, and she don't find it out until she wakes and gives them something, and looks for it and it is gone. They have done had it and worn it on. Of course she misses a racket, but they smile and sing "What Is Home Without a Mother," and in due time everything is calm and serene. She is hunting up things to take to the mother and child in America, and she will find something. The big trunk is not the only hiding place she has got. I lost my hatchet and she hid it under her bureau where she had put it away for me. She found it out in the yard where I had left it. It takes half her time to pick up and put away for the family and we let her do it and never complain.

"I've been at work this week. It was my planting opening," she said, for the flowers had to be brought out of the pit—one hundred and forty-four pots and boxes, and some of them big heavy ones and I had them all to lift and carry up the steps with my back—my lame old back—but she said it was good for me to take exercise. I had to go to a frame to put them in, but the large rose bushes and geraniums laid to go on the ground and holes had to be dug large enough to bury a dog in and then I had to haul soil, manure and some fertilizer from the barn yard and mix it all up and fill up the holes again and then plant water and plant out the things and then spit up some stake and tie the roses to the stakes, and I don't know whether that is all or not. If they don't seem to be doing well I'll exercise. "What are you going to do with all those plants in the pots?" said I. "Put them in the ground, offcourse," she said. "You can dig a little every day while I am gone. The girls will help you. It will keep your mind employed and keep you from grieving after me, but, of course, I know that you are glad to see me, but, of course, I know that you are glad to see me, but, of course, I know that you are glad to see me." There were two large circular beds that have to be bordered before I go. Oh, my country! Eleven dozen holes to dig. There are the geraniums and fuchsias and verbenas and carnations and dignations and high bisous and low bisous and begonias and little noshes and heliotropes and cenerarais and cataplasms and camelias and tube roses, and ever so many more jaw-breaking things, and all this comes down my digging that Rover pig and putting in a glass cover over it. I thought the pit waste keep them in, but I suppose I will have to take them out every spring and put them and take the African country and put them back in the pit. But it is all right, I reckon. Flowers are a good thing and every thing costs labor and care. I found two ripe strawberries in my garden today and gave them to her with conscious pride in my success as a gardener, but she made no demonstration, and remarked that she would find plenty of them in America. She will be back here with Americans, I know, and will want to move there. Everybody does.

Well, I have bought the dress—something to wear—and forgotten the new hat, but we went to call it mourning and she likes it. It is as fine and soft as camel's hair and never goes out of fashion. It becomes the stately matron or the stylish maid, or the rich widow or the commoner at court. It is the milliner's right now, and is to be made up in style à la mode, according to Hoyle, with epaulettes on the shoulders and none on the back, and be trimmed with lace curtains and lambswool and ecruette. I like that. Our grandmothers wore them that way and I'm glad the fashion has come back. I wish the old style trunks would come back—the small leather trunks about half as large as the one I bought today. Women had something to wear then, and the little trunk held it, but now they have no room and get a big trunk won't hold it. This maternal journey is a big thing. The inertia of a woman, a grandmother, is hard to overcome. It is hard to get her away from the chimney corner and start on a long journey by the window away from needle and thread, but she is going. There may be as many perils by the way as ever St. Paul encountered, but she is going. She will leave late at noon and get a big trunk full of time, but still it requires nerve and heroism. She is so afraid something will happen to some of us children while she is gone. "They are so careless and clumsy and so impatient, and their father just lets them do as they please. The calf eat up the madeira vines last spring, and now there is another calf just big enough to eat the doves." She is so barbarous that Marcelle Nell rose and don't let anything happen to it. If anybody gets sick or hurt you must telegraph me."

The children look solemn and sad as their mother gives her last warning and entreaties, but I see them winking and blinking and hear them plotting and planning what a big time they are going to have. They think that I will surrender to their cunning and give them a hand in the insurrection, but I won't. I will keep them within the bounds of propriety. I'm going to be an austere man if I can.

When will this thing stop? When will the maternal ancestor have rest from her labors and be free from anxiety about her offspring? Never! no, never! while she lives, nor after she dies, I reckon. It is hard, very hard, on those mothers who have such a host of scattered children—liable to sickness and distress. The children go off and marry and settle down and take on new loves that smoothens the sharp edges of their mother's heart change in the mother. Hers never grows cold or lukewarm. She would follow her child to the end of the world if she could, and she sends her heartiest regards to the child that is mother whose children's love continues with her age, whose affection grows stronger and purer as the years roll on.

BILL ABY
ALL'S WELL.

Fat, far from all this world's bewildering riot,
And endless din,
The sorrow, and the sin,
The struggle, stress, and strife,
The burden of this life,
To the most holy, the quietest, the truest,
The cloudless calm, the peace unpeakable,
Which in the cloistered grave alone doth dwell,
Beloved! thou hast past;
Thou art at rest, thy last—
All's well!

Parewell, farewell! Peace be to this forever!
Thy sleep profound,
No voice nor any sound,
Shall ever intrude upon;
Thy dream of life is done,
Never again to vex thee, never revert!
O, graves receive her soul,
Another Plutonia comes, with thee to dwell,
Adversity of Life's dolor;
God rest thy happy soul—
All's well!

THE BLACK CENTINEL.

The Gigantic Colonization Game Being Played by Europe.

LONDON, April 14.—The eyes of England are less upon the Dardanelles at present than upon Africa. It was one of the brilliant dreams of Beaconsfield to build up another Indian empire in the African continent, and twenty years have witnessed a considerable stride toward the accomplishment of that object.

Egypt, on the north, is virtually a British possession, and the empire of the Khedive nominally extends to far beyond the equator. Indeed, there is no set limit to its bounds, and but for the successful rebellion in the Sudan the English pushing north from Cape Colony might ere long this have joined hands with Anglo-Egyptian forces, pushing southward toward the great lakes of Central Africa.

The recent quarrel between Great Britain and Portugal does not obscure the fact that both Portugal and Belgium are, as to colonial schemes, mere catspaws for England. The British were a little too rude in thrusting the paw aside to grasp a coveted morsel, but, although Portugal still shows her teeth, her anger is gradually subsiding and the Portuguese are recognizing that, while they hold their colonies simply on British suzerainty, England is a protector as well as a plunderer. As for Belgium, King Leopold's philanthropic schemes are simply regarded as preparing the Congo region for English rule.

The situation is different, however, as regards France and Germany, and here is where English uneasiness comes in. While it is true that French colonization in past ages had paved the way for English conquests, yet Africa is not America, and England is in no position to repeat the achievements of Wolfe and Orléans.

Whatever the French take in Africa they will probably hold, and that means so much loss to British traders and shopkeepers. France is building up a respectable empire in western Africa, and the subjection of Morocco, while it may be delayed, is regarded as certain in the distant future. The existence of such a barbarous state as Morocco within sight and at the threshold of western Europe is looked upon as a blot upon civilization, and but for the intense jealousy of the powers it would long ago have been placed under some form of decent and enlightened government. Barbarous executions for slight offenses are almost of daily occurrence, and the least horrible penalty is the deliberate hacking of men's heads off with knives. When the time comes to seize Morocco, therefore, the cause of humanity will be pleaded as the excuse for gratifying ambition, and the plea will not be without force.

For the present France has no easy task on hand in the conquest of Dahomey, which is much better prepared to meet an invader than was Assandane when the British marched to Comacina.

The German movement in the direction of Equatorial Africa is far more unwelcome to the British than French activity in the western part of the continent, for it amounts to open poaching on an English domain.

The Germans, akin the English in origin and some essential features of character, are naturally likely to be successful competitors with the French. They have the phlegm and patience requisite in the settlement of new regions, and they have the English antipathy to interference with native rulers. As conquerors of entirely new countries they are yet untried, for Germany had no organized existence when America was the chess-board of the nations; but the multitude who have emigrated to the United States, if reports are true, is a flourishing condition.

The rulers of Germany are anxious to find some country in which the subjects of the empire can send their surplus population to live and till land. Equatorial Africa offers the only opportunity. America and Australasia are out of the question. No European power not now established there can expect to gain a foot-hold in America. A few islands of Australasia may be open to seizure, but they would form but a poor foundation for extended colonial enterprise. Asia, outside of China and Japan, is the prey of England and Russia, with a precarious tenure by France in Tonquin.

Southern Africa is held by the British; Egypt and the river Nile by the Turks; the British, the French, and perhaps the Spaniards. Besides, the country is unfitted for German colonists. The field that remains, vast in extent and majestic in its possibilities, is Equatorial and Central Africa. The Germans perceive this, and cabinet changes and political and social agitation have not, and doubtless will not, prevent a resolute advance toward the seizure of a sufficient portion of Africa to receive, for ages to come, the surplus of German population.

The English perceive all this, but they can not interfere. War is out of the question, and all that can be done is to obstruct German progress by such methods as England has never been scrupulous about resorting to, whether dealing with Frenchmen or Americans or any other nation.

For the present the British trader will turn the situation to advantage by supplying the Dahomians with rifles and powder to slaughter the French, and the Soudanese with ammunition to shoot the Germans, while the best product of Sheffield cutlery will continue to be used in the human sacrifices in which the more barbarous potentates of Africa indulge.

Tom Ochiltree's Story.

From the New York Star.

"There is considerable trouble between the north and the south relative to the treatment of the negroes down in Dixie," said ex-Congressman Tom Ochiltree last night at the Hoffman house; "and that reminds me of one of our Texas darlings named Sam, whom I used to have in my service. Sam could read, and in the newspapers he had seen so much of the love the people of the north bear for the colored man, that he concluded the north was the place for him. So to Iowa he went where he was pretty well treated. The people there called him 'Mr.' and shook hands with him, and talked politics with him as if he were an equal, but nobody seemed anxious to have Sam work for him."

"After a while all his money was gone, and he then concluded the best thing for him to do was to go back to Texas; so he started on foot, hoping to pick up enough food on the way to keep him going. The first place he reached was a farm house, where a man from New York lived. The farmer was very polite, but when food was mentioned, said times were hard and he didn't believe he had anything to spare. He tried several other farm houses, but always with the same result; everybody was polite, but nobody gave him any food. For two or three days he didn't have anything to eat, until finally he came to a place where there was a man in a coat and morning grass. To him he told the old story of leaving Texas, of his bad luck in Iowa, and of his desire to get back to Galveston, and of his great hunger. Before he had concluded his story, the farmer interrupted him. 'You black idiot!' he exclaimed. 'Why didn't you have sense enough to stay in Texas?' Sam's face brightened instantly. He almost fell on his knees for joy, and he cried out: 'Boss, you know how glad I is to see you. When did you leave the south yourself?' Oh, boss, but I is glad to git' among friends again.' 'Go in the house there,' you black fool, an' git some chuck. Perhaps you will know enough another time to stay where you belong.'"

How to Grow Beautiful.

She knew it was necessary to become beautiful in order to be considered attractive, and so she made the art of beautifying a study. She felt it wiser to be plump and hearty than to be thin and delicate. To this end she knew good health was essential. She had suffered from backaches, headaches, and bearing down pains, and was restless until she found the medicine she needed. It improved her appetite and digestion. Her habits became regular. Her flesh increased and became more firm and solid. Her complexion became clear and beautiful, and her face gleamed with health. Her hair grew red and her cheeks grew rosy. She did not know an ache or a pain. Exercise gave her pleasure and also became the life of her companions. She could ride a bicycle for many miles and never seem to grow weary. Her laughter was catching and all the young men loved her. She is now a happy wife and mother. "What a wonderful cure!" was her cry. Well, no matter, let us know the medicine she used. With pleasure, with pleasure, sweet girls. She used Dr. John Bull's Sarsaparilla. If any there be among you who are sickly, go quickly, and do likewise—Mansfield Independent

Cured by Cuticura

I suffer about your CUTICURA REMEDIES, and purchased them from my druggist, and obtained almost immediate relief. I began to notice that the scaly eruptions gradually dropped off and disappeared one by one, and have been fully cured. I had the disease thirteen months before I began taking the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and in four or five weeks was entirely cured. My disease was psoriasis and proclisias. I recommended the CUTICURA REMEDIES to all in my vicinity, and thank you of a great many who have taken them, and thank you for the knowledge of them, especially mothers who have babies with scaly eruptions on their heads and bodies. I cannot express in words my thanks for your work. My body was covered with scales, and I was an awful spectacle to look at. Now my skin is as nice and clear as a baby's.

CEDARTOWN!

A City of Many Resources.

Superior Manufacturing Advantages.

Vast Mineral and Agricultural Wealth.

What Nature Has Lavished Upon This Section.

A Revelation of Combined Advantages That Tell Their Story.

A Fertile Valley That Can Sustain a Hundred Thousand People.

God's country. And God's people inhabit it. Cedartown is just now one of the most important localities in the south. Any visitor to this city of vast resources, would find a revelation in her mineral wealth. There are as many combined advantages to the square yard in this part of Georgia as can be shown in any place on the earth's surface. Two large coal fields have been made accessible by new railroads, thus securing for all time, an abundant supply of cheap manufacturing fuel.

COLONEL J. K. BARTON.

The hidden stores of iron, manganese, marble, limestone, building stone and slate, insure a safe and rapid growth as soon as the genius of development is fairly at work. Her unexcelled climate, superior health and superb society, give impressive emphasis to the many other claims of superiority justly held by this city of phenomenal worth.

The fine mountain streams that course her streets, the excellent springs that lend refreshing beauty to her natural attractions and give health and comfort to her people, besides furnishing superior conveniences for manufacturers, form in themselves a volume of unsurpassed advantages.

Her lately improved railroad facilities including the conversion of the East and West road into a broad gauge, and the early connection with the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia, make Cedartown an inviting point for manufacturing—she having the same rates of freight as are allowed Atlanta and Chattanooga.

Cedartown has a corner on mercantile advantages as well as on far-reaching natural resources—being in the center of the great agricultural belt where cotton and grain overlap, thus reaping the combined benefits from both, and insuring the most gratifying activity of the whole year.

The commendable interest taken in religious concerns speaks well for the moral growth of this people that God made, and the encouraging activity in and the growing importance of her splendidly managed public schools tells of the growing culture that adorns this community of exceptional merit.

The great adaptability of the soil of Polk county to the cultivation of every variety of crops, including cotton, corn, wheat, oats, barley, millet, garden vegetables, all the cereals, and apples, peaches, pears, grapes and the famous sweetpotatoes, makes this an extremely desirable location for farmers, when it is considered that two crops a year from the same land can be secured, and Cedartown is found in their low value compared with similar lands in the west and north.

But why attempt to enumerate the comprehensive advantages and attractions that distinguish this city of many excellencies. To see her many graceful and beautiful maidens

and her attractive and womanly matrons, is to kindle new an excited love and admiration of the entire sex; to meet and mingle with her generous and chivalrous manhood in a genuine pleasure to inspect the broad, fertile fields that encircle her limits and give life to her growing trade, is a treat to all who appreciate the great blessings of farm production; to stand upon the famous Reid bank, and look down upon the expansive valley of which Cedartown is the principal attraction, with the beautiful and fast-flowing Cedar creek winding through her fields of clover nestling between verdant growths of shapely cedars, symmetrical oaks and stately sycamores, suggests a dream of fairy wealth that is embodied in the hidden surrounding hills, which some day are to burst forth in an eruption of development that will with their enriching contents, is an Alhambra of thought peculiarly suggestive of the wonderful resources of this heaven-blessed section. Still, my imagination does the subject injustice! Here is an exhaustless and varied store of wealth, lavished from the most plentiful palm of an Omnipotent hand, and nothing short of an Infinite mind can picture the great, undeveloped resources that here await the magic touch of man's genius.

MINING AND MINERALS. The prominence of Cherokee, Georgia, as a mining section is fast becoming world-wide. The superior quality of the iron ore that abounds in the country immediately surrounding Cedartown, is such as to commend it to universal favor among the leading iron men of the world, who have emphasized their opinion of its worth in the strongest sort of words.

Mr. Kelly, of pig iron fame, after speaking strongly of the intrinsic value of the ores of Polk county, said, during his recent visit to this section, while en route to the Reid bank, overlooking the city, "that Cedartown could sustain a population of one hundred thousand people, and would yet have them." The opinion of Mr. E. W. Marsh, one of the most thoughtful business men in the south, "that Cedartown had the brightest future of any town in the state, north of Atlanta," further confirmed the latter estimate of Mr. Kelly.

Speaking further on the great value of the ore in this famous iron belt, I recall the words of Mr. Sam Noble, of Anniston, who stated "that it was better for making car wheels than any other ore in the south—an opinion confirmed by many leading authorities who have carefully analyzed this ore.

There are a number of banks being mined in the county, several of the more important around Cedartown being the Reid, Peak, Ledbetter, and the great bank operated by the Cherokee Iron works. There are about ten thousand tons of ore shipped from Cedartown per month, and this goes to Anniston, Birmingham, Atlanta, Chattanooga, South Pittsburg, Dayton, and other iron centers. With increased facilities for shipment, this quantity will be very largely magnified, as there is a wide-spread demand in all parts of the world for the ore mined at this point. Polk county possesses four distinct ore belts, all showing up a fine analysis: the "Fish Creek," "Cedartown," "Tucumseh," and the "Southwestern."

In addition to these, there are several manganese ore belts in the county contiguous to the iron ore belts.

Then there are exhaustless quarries of marbles, limestones, sandstones and slates of durability and cleavage that are being profitably worked. The quarries of Polk county are famous.

Georgia and Alabama Mining Company. This company has done much toward developing Cedartown and the mineral wealth of Polk county. Under the original organization, S. E. Noble, of Anniston, is president; J. K. Barton, of Cedartown, is vice-president and general manager, and Frank Fitch is secretary. The company owns several thousand acres of the best ore in the state, making in all, perhaps, the largest collection, combining quantity with quality, in the south. They operate under a contract of six hundred tons per month.

Their ore is shipped to Anniston, Birmingham, Atlanta, Chattanooga, South Pittsburg, Dayton and other iron centers. It is of the very best quality, and, as has been stated by Mr. Samuel Noble, it is better for making car wheels than any ore in the south. Several of the banks of the company are located in sight of Cedartown, and are supplied with all necessary conveniences for quick and thorough work and ready transportation. They have the largest and most complete washers, with a capacity of a daily output of 600 tons. These are furnished with an inexhaustible supply of water from Cedar creek, conveyed by means of a force pump, and the entire modus operandi of the mining appliances used by them is as perfect as the machinery itself.

This company, Cedartown had a population of nine hundred, and now it is three thousand. During its first year's operation it sold to the Wootstock Iron company, of Anniston, five iron banks immediately west of the town, and by this means was largely instrumental in inducing the Samuel Noble mining enterprise to locate near the town.

During the summer of 1887 it purchased ninety acres of land in the northwestern portion of the city, and shortly afterwards, at considerable expense, had streets graded through the property and the entire tract cut up into lots and set with shade trees. About fifteen acres of this tract was sold off to parties desiring to build residences, the remaining two hundred and fifty lots being still owned by the company. There is a tract of twenty-five acres in this belt, beautifully located and fronting on Cedar creek, a large stream of two hundred horse power, that has been set apart for manufacturing sites, and, in order to encourage development, the organization generously proposes to donate any person or company as much ground, (with an abundance of water front) as they may need, for the purpose of locating thereon a manufacturing enterprise of any character.

The newly projected Ore Belt railroad, which is to extend from Cedartown to Cave

Spring, in order to connect with the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia systems, has been graded through this property, and the completion of the line is a foregone conclusion. Then, as it to make this tract even more desirable, the beautiful Cedar spring, one of the largest of a great collection, gushes from the southern boundary hill in a bold flow of the purest water that ever was distilled from nature's laboratory.

The work of improvement has already begun, as the erection of several handsome residences. Then a recent bond for title has been made to certain manufacturers of Massachusetts for six acres to be used as a plant for an extensive cotton and woolen mill. The company has already spent several thousand dollars in advertising their beautiful city, and are among the readiest to respond to any demand which has for its object the material welfare of their section. It is operated under a capital of $20,000, one-half of the stock being held in New York and Birmingham, and the other half among local stockholders. Carl Ernest, a New York banker, is president of the company, G. G. Leake, a gentleman of wide-awake property, is vice-president; A. Richardson, a leading lawyer of thoroughly progressive notions, is secretary; J. O. Hardwick, the able financier of the First National bank, is treasurer, and J. A. Barnes, of Atlanta, chemist and metallurgical director. The executive committee is composed of Carl Ernest, J. O. Hardwick, N. M. Wright, L. S. Ledbetter, and Jud Crab, all men of broad views and excellent business discretion.

Cherokee Iron Works. No-one enterprise has contributed so much to the development of this section of the state as the Cherokee Iron works, a company that operates an extensive furnace at Cedartown, and a paid-up capital of $300,000. The plant of this company is very comprehensive, embracing a large furnace, considered by leading iron men to be one of the finest, a foundry, machine shop and forge shop, and a superior merchant mill. All of these enterprises (such a reference is suggested by the importance of each) are managed with marvelous precision, and their wonderful regularity shows that they are operated by a most methodical and painstaking head.

The large furnace is a study of interesting magnitude. The visitor who with the careful construction of the plant, and the most casual investigation shows an industry of mammoth proportions. Improved Babcock and Wilson boiler of 500-horse power are used, with an 85-ton Walmer blowers of 320-horse power, having a capacity of 20,000 feet per minute, at a pressure of ten pounds. This immense piece of machinery rests on a cast-iron plate that is placed on a solid rock base at the depth of fourteen feet, and then walled up with brick, making it so stable that not a shank can be when the mammoth machinery is at work. There are double sets of boilers and blowers, and every precaution has been taken and expense incurred in order to prevent the necessity of a shut down. There are two crushing machines, one small and one large, the latter having the capacity of a ton a minute. The ore is dumped into these from trestles, and after it has passed over the screens, removing the dirt, it is ready for the furnace, where it is made into 1, 2 and 3 iron, after which it is placed on flat cars and rolled through the building to a pair of Fairbanks' scales, weighed and drawn upon a trestle ten feet in height, from which the bars are thrown with great force across the blocks below and broken into pigs. It is necessary to have this unusual arrangement to break the bars, as the Cherokee iron is so much harder than other qualities. The furnace has a daily capacity of 100 tons of ore, 50 tons of lime and 100 tons of coke.

In addition to a splendidly appointed merchant mill, the company has a convenient, spacious and well-stocked storehouse, from which the workmen are supplied, and about forty comfortable homes for the mill's employees, the same being most judiciously located, those for the white tenants being directly in front of the plant, and facing on the place, and those for the negroes fronting on the dike that has been built in the rear of the furnace to prevent annoyance and inconvenience from overflows. Then there is an immense barn, built with an eye to comfort and convenience, that contains, in addition to unusual loft capacity, sixty stalls.

Carl Ernest, of New York, is popularly known as "Georgia's Iron King," and has contributed largely to building up Cedartown, having been one of the promoters in the construction of the East and West road, and the Episcopal church, gave the ground for building the city schools, and as mayor and private citizen has done many things to merit the gratitude of his people.

Mr. J. R. Barber, the courteous and efficient secretary, is a gentleman of excellent business capacity, and is prominently identified with the growth of the town, being also a director in the First National bank.

The First National Bank. This is one of the most prominent institutions in the state, and the name of Hardwick is so closely identified with its success, that throughout this part of Georgia and Tennessee, this large banking firm enjoys the fullest confidence of business men in all parts, being prompt and industrious in their collections and returns.

The First National, at Cedartown, is a thoroughly equipped institution, having a splendid building, well fitted, with a substantial vault and best improved safes. It operates under a capital of $50,000, and the entire management has been such as to inspire the confidence of the best and most successful business spirits of the city.

The officials and directors of this bank belong to the most progressive and thoughtful element, and this, together with the known character of each, has done much towards adding to the reputation of the First National.

It succeeded the old banking house of Hardwick & Co., established in 1882, which was noted for its strong individuality.

Colonel J. K. Barton, vice-president and organizer of this bank, is a gentleman of strong ability and is due much of the solid advancement of Cedartown within the last few years. This bank is a pet with him, and he cleverly does it reflect his genius and energy.

These gentlemen, with Messrs. R. G. Leake, J. W. Lindsey, a leading merchant and collier, C. W. Smith, a prominent cotton dealer, and J. M. Stewart, manager of the truck company, form the board of directors, all men of the highest character, true business sagacity, and eminently successful in their various undertakings.

The bank is well equipped, having a splendid vault and the most secure safes for its deposits.

Face, Hubbard & Williamson. This firm deals largely in real estate, having a fine tract of land, containing sixty acres, with the railroad running through the center. This is a property of the highest value, and was bought by them for $2,800, including taxes, and they have since sold for $20,000, and the remainder, which, placed at a proportionate valuation would bring $40,000, has been taken from the market for the present, at a time when the owners were receiving daily applications for the same.

The splendid railroad frontage makes the property very valuable for business ideas, manufactures, and the time is not distant when it will be in demand for such sites. It is splendidly and could be used for any purpose without costly preparation.

The gentlemen who own the tract are men of energy and means, and they are dealing in to make this a wonderfully profitable investment, and in doing it, will add much to the material growth of their city. In taking the tract from the market they have been guided by the fact that they have some undeveloped plans, and they are in possession of information that will lead to rapid development of this beautiful city. But whatever the value of the property is desirable enough to make it sought after, and will always command good prices.

J. S. Stubbs & Co. This is one of the oldest as it is one of the most extensive mercantile establishments in the city. Organized in 1873, they have done business continuously for nearly twenty years, during which time they have built up a widespread reputation for fair dealing, in addition to establishing themselves as men of the highest business judgment.

For the purpose of enlarging their business, and with a view of taking time by the forelock and preparing for the vast development of the future, they sold out their large retail business and went into an extensive wholesale trade as grocers and cotton factors on the first of January.

They occupy two new brick rooms built by themselves, giving them storage room of 60,000. They carry a $25,000 stock of goods, and are confident of a trade of $100,000 the first year. Their purpose is to do an extensive business of a quarter of a million dollars. The two men to be traveled by them will cover all the territory from Cartersville to Pell City, on the East Tennessee, Rome and Columbus roads.

Mr. J. S. Stubbs, of the firm, is one of the best equipped business men in his section, combining large experience with good judgment and exalted conscience. His chairman of the board of education of his city.

Mr. T. M. Pace, a native of Putnam county, as an old and respected citizen of Cedartown, having resided there for twenty years. In addition to his large real estate interests, he is connected with the new iron and machine works of J. B. Phillips & Co.

Mr. R. G. Herbert, of the firm, is one of the growth of his city in various ways, being a director in the Cherokee Land company, and having prominent identification with leading enterprises that are agitated by his people. Though a young man, his business success is something phenomenal, and the future that awaits his well-directed energy and conservative talents, will be gratifying to himself and helpful to the material growth of his community. His recent purchase of one-fourth interest in the celebrated Ledbetter iron bank is but another evidence of his astute investments and certain future, as this ranks among the finest mineral property in the country. WILMINGTON

The Great Port City of the Carolinas.

The Naval Stores and Fishing Interests.

The New Fibre-Bagging Industry.

A Magnificent Channel, and Splendid Wharves.

Sauntering Along the Beach at Wrightsville.

A Graphic Display of Industry and Enterprise.

The Men Who Have Built Up the Metropolis of North Carolina.

WILMINGTON, N. C., April 17.—[Special.]—The old north state metropolis. Cotton, tar, pitch and turpentine. The magic names which have given Wilmington material wealth.

And they continue to fill the coffers of her stable merchants and industrious suburban residents.

Today this flourishing city has a population of over 25,000 souls, with a most brilliant prospect for future growth and importance.

It is not my purpose to go into a history of the "City by the Sea" from its birth in 1725, when it was known as Fort Anderson, but rather to get down to its meritable worth as a Mecca for those seeking the investment of capital in channels which offer such large returns.

To those not familiar with its advantages as a seaport, and since the completion of the Cape Fear and Yadkin railroad, an inland center of large commercial interests, a review of some of her trade figures will prove the strongest argument in her behalf.

The arrival of vessels at this port for the last twelve months have been: American, 271; foreign, 194; with a total tonnage of 211,412.

The exportations during that period and through those carriers were:

Cotton, 176,211 bales.
Naval stores, spirits turpentine, 76,904 casks.
Rice, 330,419 barrels.
Tar, 72,200 barrels.
Crude turpentine, 24,900 barrels.
Pitch, 7,003 barrels.
Peanut, 84,100 bags.
Lumber, 54,102,866 feet.
Shingles, 7,001,405.

The growth in these articles of trade, when compared with the statistics of 1880, shows an almost unprecedented gain in the city's trade.

But Wilmington's possibilities do not end here. The recent opening of that great highway, the Cape Fear and Yadkin railroad, actually places the city almost in the position of inability to meet the wants of her growing trade along that route.

Take, if you please, a map and trace along 830 miles of rich country, dotted here and there with thrifty communities, and they in the lap of wealth, and you will form some idea of the new demand for supplies from Wilmington, the objective point, forced by the enterprise which built the Cape Fear road.

Every branch of trade is here represented and by firms of the highest standing and responsibility. In the grocery line, Wilmington does more perhaps than any other four cities in the State, and it is especially in this branch that new certainties present themselves to those seeking good points for business ventures.

Another safe and profitable opportunity is in the banking line. Notwithstanding the immense trade of the city, she has but two commercial and one savings bank and they have surplus almost equal to their capital. In this important adjunct to trade a brilliant opportunity is presented to capitalists. In all the requisite paraphernalia of a city, Wilmington is in no way behind. Fine hotels, public halls, educational institutions, churches and palatial residences give an air of ease and comfort upon the part of the citizens. Well governed, healthfully situated, close to the ocean, and a truly hospitable people, she invites within her walls, the capitalist and the artisan. Nature has thrown her into the lap of luxury, so to speak, with excellent water facilities and six railroads, and she cannot help, I think, ten years hence, being one of the largest and most important cities in the south.

SOME OF HER ATTRACTIONS.

The sea shore resorts, which ally the severity of the summer sun, are nearly at her door. Wrightsville sound, which embraces the Hamocks is only eight miles from the city and reached by a splendid spit turnpike road and the Seacoast railway. By rail the distance is longer but the traveler is well repaid for the trip, by the scenery along the route, presenting nature in its undisturbed beauty, landing you right at the beach which is kissed by the rolling waves of the great Atlantic. It is near this resort where the State Guard encampment is annually held, the grounds having been donated to the state for this purpose. The United States government has erected a sea coast battery near the camp grounds, and exercises with this heavy ordnance and target practice by the militia are features of each season's encampment.

The Carolina beach, is a point reached by the Cape Fear steamers, and is growing in popularity year by year. A fine hotel building and well equipped for comfort, with a short line railroad, are marked conveniences.

SOUTHWEST.—At a distance of twenty-seven miles from Wilmington, and three miles from the mouth of the Cape Fear river, is located Southport, formerly known as Smithville. This is one of the most desirable resorts, either in winter or summer, on the whole Atlantic coast, its marine view being far superior to Cape May or Atlantic City, New Jersey. Fort Johnson, now abandoned by the general government, was located here, and the grounds will likely be turned into a park this summer. The climate is cool and salubrious. Excellent hotel arrangements and beautiful scenery will no doubt make Southport the Saratoga of the south.

Visitors to Wilmington will have lost a great deal if they fail to take in the resorts referred to.

THE FISHING INTERESTS.

The importance of this branch of trade in this city is far greater than most people suppose. While there is only one firm doing an exclusive fish business, there are many persons in the city and surrounding country, who depend entirely or in part for a livelihood from the fish and oysters which are to be had in the rivers and the waters of the ocean along this coast.

A ready market is always open for shad, red horse, mullets and other fish caught hereabouts, which are shipped all over the state and as far north as New York, and southerly, as far as Birmingham, and west to Tennessee.

HER RAILROADS.

An interesting network of railroads center here, being the Atlantic coast line system extending from Boston, via New York, to Wilmington, to Tampa bay; the Carolina Central reaches out 267 miles into the western portion of the state; the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley is a through line from the sea to the mountains. This line will connect with the Norfolk and Western. The Wilmington Seacoast is a short line from the city to the sea. The Ocean View is another short road which, however, is an adjunct to the former, the two making a convenient carrier for trade. The Wilmington and Onslow is now under construction and will terminate at Newbern.

THE FIBRE BAGGING INDUSTRY.

Thus this "City by the Sea" is ready for a trebled maritime as well as inland trade, and the seeker after fortune should not pass her by.

CHANNEL AND WHARFAGE.

While it is a remarkable fact that the river facing Wilmington had an average depth of twenty-two feet one hundred years ago, and the gradually filling and new sources of streams breaking from it lessened the depth to about ten feet, when the United States government commenced the deepening of the channel, which is now about nineteen feet

South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Arkansas. Mr. Latimer will prove himself equal to the task of managing these diversified interests with the highest pecuniary results.

Smith & Gilchrist.

Well known in connection with Wilmington's best interests, is this house. Both young men vigorous in intellect and body, cautious in business operations, prompt in the dispatch of matters entrusted to them, these gentlemen have risen to the mercantile position of A. I. As agents for the Acme Manufacturing company, they have succeeded in nearly doubling every year the sales of fertilizers, the Acme brand while giving attention to their large grocery trade.

Colonel F. W. Kerchner.

This gentleman is president of the chamber of commerce, ex-member of the board of aldermen, and now treasurer of the Groves Hardware company, one of the substantial wholesale concerns of this city. The colonel is on the tongue of good report, and added to this, his deep interest in the welfare of his adopted city, he occupies the high position of being termed a man among men. Colonel Kerchner's ideas are not confined to the branch of trade in which he is directly interested, but his general knowledge of commercial affairs has called him into the councils of those who build cities upon material and enduring foundations.

Alexander Sprunt & Son.

This house is perhaps one of the largest exporters of cotton in the United States, its business aggregating $5,000,000 for the season of nine months. The firm was established fifteen years ago by Mr. Alexander Sprunt, now deceased, but it has steadily grown to its present immense proportions through the able management of Mr. James Sprunt, assisted by his brother, Mr. William H. Sprunt. Besides the large quantity of cotton it handles, a big business is done in naval stores and turpentine, and it is possible that in the latter product they lead the country in that line. Standing high as business men and citizens, they add materially to the city's interest by attracting foreign trade. The Champion compresses and warehouse company operated by this firm is without any doubt running the largest compresses in the world. The capacity of the warehouses is for cotton 25,000 bales and fertilizers 10,000 tons. They work two of the most powerful machines of 30 inch cylinders each, with a capacity of compressing 3,000 bales of cotton per day.

Hon. S. H. Fishblate.

The people of Wilmington are not slow to appreciate worth. The subject of this notice attracted the attention of the people of this city by two very marked characteristics of Mr. Fishblate—energy and honesty. Casting about upon two occasions to find a man suitable for mayor, they happily hit upon Mr. Fishblate and the unanimity with which the voters gave him the honorable position was flattering to him and a credit to the citizens. It seems that the most powerful machine of 30 inch cylinders each, with a capacity of compressing 3,000 bales of cotton per day.</

ON THAT HIGH HILL FRONTING MORRIS, Sycamore, Carle and May streets. These very desirable lots are in the eastern portion of the city, giving a grand view of the Copeland hill property and Inman park, which lies beyond. The car factory lies just south, and so near this locality that parties are bound to seek investments in this beautiful and healthy locality. You will never be able to buy as cheap as right now. Expensive improvements are being made at this time that will so enhance values in the future as to surprise
you. The electric railroad, on Highland avenue, one block away, furnishes cheap and rapid transit.
Wanted men are placing their funds in this neighborhood, which means profits. Come in and get a plot, examine for yourself, and attend the sale.

WASHINGTON HEIGHTS
FOR SALE
AT AUCTION!

April 29, at 2:30 O'clock, P. M.

THESE LOTS ARE JUST SOUTH OF ORmond street, and are absolutely the finest and most desirable elevated and healthy portion of Atlanta. The magnificent state capitol, the pride of Georgia, fronts upon this street. Several of our best citizens worship, are on this street.
Bankers, capitalists, merchants, princes live upon Washington street. This is the home of our distinguished United States senator. Some of the most elegant and costly mansions ever built in the south are upon Washington street. Here is a beautifully graded and paved street, with curbs and brick sidewalks all laid and ready for use, with street cars running through every 1/2 minutes.

A large amount of money has been spent in making Washington Heights
the grandest and most desirable locality in the city. This property has no superior in the city. Washington street has long been considered to be one of the most fashionable and delightful drives in the city. You will be handicapped by no pleasant afternoon ride to drive upon Washington street. See the many elegant and stylish carriages filled with the many and elite of the south dashing along to the heights city in every direction. Now is your time to buy these so cheap. None are excited, and terms are exceedingly liberal—1/4 cash, balance in 6, 12 and 18 months. Should you wish to pay all cash and yet wish to build and need funds, we will advance the money for the same at 6 per cent.

NEW INDUSTRIES.

TWO FACTORIES WHICH ARE MAK-ING MONEY.

How Thousands of Matches Are Made
Every Day—A Stove Which Will Save Fuel.

Among the new industries which have lately begun a vigorous existence in Atlanta is a match factory.

At the point where Mason and Turner's ferry road crosses the Western and Atlantic railroad, a long one story brick edifice has recently been erected. The building is full of costly machinery, and it is there that thousands and tens of thousands of matches are daily manufactured.

Matches have come to be one of the necessities of modern civilization. The existence of the small illuminator is taken as a matter of course by the grand army of match consumers, and no one ever stops to consider how it was made, or of the great capital that is required to establish a match factory.

The American Match factory, which is now doing business in Atlanta, is the newest one in the country, and being furnished with all the latest improvements in machinery, it is a model of what a match factory should be.

Mr. C. W. DuPre, the president of the new factory, has been engaged in the manufacture of matches for many years and it is owing to a great measure, to his energy and business acumen that the factory has been located in Atlanta. Mr. George C. Lelman is the secretary and treasurer, and the directors of the company are Messrs. DuPre,
J. C. Hallman, J. H. Porter, Colonel Z. A.
Rice, Captain R. H. Lowry, A. McD. Wilson and S. A. Anderson.

President DuPre has just cause to be proud of the establishment over which he presides.
A door from the business office leads into a large room where the boxes are made. One side of this room is entirely taken up with machinery. One machine prints the covers of boxes in squares of five boxes. They are then passed to another machine which by a number of rapidly revolving wheels mark out the lines which should be observed to make the box covers. A practical hand then takes them and forms them into boxes. These boxes are then passed through another machine which places a broad line of sand on one side; they then pass to another machine, which at one revolution of the funnel into five box covers.

Another machine makes the box itself by riveting the four sides into one.

The room where the matches themselves are made is also full of machinery. First, the sticks which are twice the length of the ordinary match are formed into big round bundles, firmly bound, and yet so arranged that no two matches touch. These bundles are placed in an immense revolving cylinder and taken to a machine which with a blow makes the ends even. They are next heated, then dropped in wax, then placed on a cooling machine, and then the composition is applied to both ends of the sticks, and finally they are put on the big cylinder again to revolve until the composition is hard. This double-ended match is then cut in two by another machine and is ready for the market.

The Georgia Stove and Range company is another new concern, which is rapidly developing an important industry.

Six months ago only a small factory occupied the place which is now filled by the Georgia Stove company.

The officers of the company are G. B.
Everett, president; W. R. Shropshire, business manager; T. J. Jeffries, secretary and treasurer; and D. A. McCall, superintendent.

When these gentlemen took hold of the new enterprise it at once became full of vigor and enterprise, and the wonderful increase in business is attributed to their foresight.

Over twenty-five molders are now employed in the factory, and they make every sort of stove fixtures and grates, as well as all manner of iron kettles, pots and skillets.

Every afternoon at 3 o'clock the great heat takes place, and then the shed is anything but a pleasant place for the uninitiated.

At one end of the place is an immense iron cylinder, where the iron is melted. An immense fire is made in this, and when at 3 o'clock it reaches a sufficient heat, twenty-five thousand pounds of melted lead begins to pour out.

Regardless of flying cinders the molders
catch the flowing metal in long handled ladles and carry it to the forms, which are prepared beforehand.

The company have now a new stove, which will soon be placed on the market, and which will doubtless prove the best stove on the market.

The fire, instead of being placed at the front is located at the back of the stove, and the drafts are so arranged that in fifteen minutes an ordinary meal can be prepared with less than half the usual consumption of fuel.

A CHARMING SPOT.
McPherson Park Being Greatly Improved—
A Few Points About It.

Just outside the city, in a beautiful grove, is the place where General McPherson was killed on the 23d of July, 1864. This spot is sacred to those who loved that great leader, and a great many people constantly visit the place, where a monument has been erected to his memory. An old negro man keeps a regular stand at the monument, and in this book can be found the names of distinguished men from all parts of the country. The land around the monument, about sixty acres, has been bought by some of our prominent citizens, and they have made it a beautiful place, calling it Mc-Pherson park. Wistons and have been opened and the park has been transformed into a thing of beauty.

Mr. W. T. B. Wilson, one of the most competent civil engineers of this section, has divided the land into the beautiful lots, which will be offered to the public. They are large lots, elevated, and on the new dummy line to the soldiers' home, just outside the city, and are very desirable to home builders or investors.

The McPherson Park company, which consists of John T. Glenn, W. H. Patterson, A. W. Calhoun, J. P. Stevens, J. S. Ford, Aaron H. Mc-Keldin & Carlton, Mr. Frank, Mrs. Josephine A.
Richardson, Mrs. Jane E. Carr, G. S. Prior, Thomas
Hughes, J. A. Robinson, Pat McDonald, A. B. Bernard, H. G. Bass, James M. Johnson, A. F. Searl, of Newnan, Ga.

R. H. Wilson and James L. Logan, Jr., have arranged for the biggest sale of the season on Thursday, the 22d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. The train on the new dummy line to the soldiers' home will run that day, and everybody is expected to take a free ride, and dinner will be served free at this big sale. Trains start from corner of Alabama and Pryor streets every thirty minutes, commencing at 10:20 o'clock, and run till the sale is over.

This big sale will be managed by the well known and famous Wilson & Logan, who can furnish you now at their office, No. 13 North Broad st.

the doctors pronounced enlargement of the liver,
during which time I decreased in weight thirty pounds. I had two of the best physicians in Columbus; but they did me but little good. I was induced by a friend to try a bottle of Harker's Wonderful Discovery. After taking one bottle it began to improve, and after taking the second bottle I found I was entirely cured. I can there-self under Dr. W. J. Tucker, and in the short space of three months I find myself nearly well.

Mrs. H. P. Stevens, an estimable lady of Waycross, Ga., says: Five years ago I was given up to die by the best physicians of southeast Georgia, all of whom said I could not live but a few weeks. As the last resort I determined to try Dr.
W. J. Tucker, of Atlanta, Ga. In less than three months the doctor had me restored to health. I am confident I would have died had it not been for his marvelous skill.

W. H. Phillips, Simsboro, La., says: I have suffered for ten years with liver disease and chronic diarrhoea, and after being treated by Dr.
W. J. Tucker a very short time am almost entirely well.

Dr. Fred B. Palmer, Atlanta, Ga., one of the best known and most popular druggists of Georgia, and also himself a physician, suffered for many years with piles, was cured by Dr. W. J.
Tucker and remains perfectly well.

Mrs. J. F. Kinsey, Canak, Ga.: Spinal disease, nervous prostration and diseases peculiar to her sex, confined to her bed, helpless for many months, treated by Dr. W. J. Tucker three or four years ago, and since that time has been able to attend to her household duties.

Mrs. J. H. Sene, Dawson, Ga., says: I have suffered for three years with piles, and was cured by Dr. W. J. Tucker's treatment, gained fifteen or twenty pounds in the last few months. I advise all suffering ladies to give him a trial.

Hon. E. E. Foy, Egypt, Ga., says he suffered for many years with a chronic malady, was cured by Dr. W. J. Tucker, and has since been able to perform his duties as a legislator.

The above statements are all true, no sane man would publish them if they were not, and if you do not believe satisfy yourself. I treat successfully chronic diseases, weaknesses of both sexes. I treat all who have dealings with me honestly and conscientiously. I am responsible for what I say and do, professing to treat simply and individually. If you are afflicted write to me or call and you shall have an honest opinion.

Treating Female by Correspondence.
It is rarely necessary for me to see my patients.
Many patients can be better treated that way than by meeting the physician direct. Patients should always give age, sex, married or single, present and former weight (as near as possible) and occupation. Follow this with history of case in your own language, giving all symptoms, inclosing stamp for reply. Address:

COUNTERS ARE CROWDED TO EXCESS.

With the Celestials. A zephyr from the Flowery Kingdom. China Silk conceals dainty as the dreamiest mind can produce.

Maybe the imagination that created such designs were fancied in luxurious opium realms. Threads close and even, marvelous printing, exquisite finish. Colors that fairly sparkle. Lovelier than French Foulard and just as strong. Soft, rich, sensuous, like a thought of the Orient. Not a dull or dreary pattern in the lot. Such Dress Goods! Did you ever see purer or prettier? The display is brilliant—kaleidoscopic. And prices so cheap that you'd almost say the bolts at a single leap bounded from some mysterious, contraband source to the counters where you find them.

China Silks 57c, worth 75c.
China Silks 98c, worth 1.25.
Plain Pongee 62c, worth 90c.
Fig'd Pongee 75c, worth 1.10.
Jap Twills 1.18, worth 1.40.
Jap Twills 1.40, worth 1.85.
Crepe, Chene 1.60, worth 2.00.
Gauze Italiene 1.75, worth 2.25.

Black Drapery Net, 75c, worth 1.25.
Silk Drapery Net, 90c, worth 1.50.
Black Drapery Net, 1.29, worth 2.00.
Black Drapery Net, 1.68, worth 2.25.
Jacinto Drapery Net, 2.19, worth 3.00.
Vivia Drapery Net, 2.35, worth 3.50.
Rich Drapery Net, 2.99, worth 4.25.
Heavy Drapery Net, 3.45, worth 5.00.

The Lace reception was a right royal affair. Interested visitors were plentiful, despite the rain of the earlier days.

For this week a conspicuous feature of the display is a rich variety of recently received Imported Drapery Nets that will be sold at European rates.

Never mind the how or the why of it. We give a few generalities, you can gather the particulars yourself.

Designs grand enough to grace the court dress of a Marchioness, others so simple and delicate that the silken webs form the merest film. Many of the higher and rarer sort hint of the classic Greek, and bring Ovid's heroines of Rome to mind. The poetic association is gratis. The Nets just a degree dearer.

Bargains Ripen With Extraordinary Rapidity.

Ten cent Gingham and fifteen cent Challis at 5 cents per yard, are two elementary causes of our phenomenal Monday morning crowds.

Two more wonderful bargains recruits rally to the standard of the Cotton Camp. Graceful new Sateens, and canny Scotch Zephyrs, 12½ cents, worth 25 cents.

Albanian Twills, 35 linear inches wide, authentic market value 30 cents, our price 19 cents. Good, heavy. Complete line of new colors.

'Varsity Serges, Cunard and Galatea Stripes, and Dungeness Plaids are plentiful once more. Those who ambled in the past will start a scramble for these.

French Henrietta, a bonna fide name, not a misleading term arbitrarily attached to a worthless stuff, 49 inches wide, price 69 cents. You may see the same offered at $1 elsewhere.

The lustre Mohairs are still here in full glory. They shimmer like satin. Other goods try to get like them but fail at every point. Agreeable to see and touch, 45c, 50c, 57c, 65c.

PARLOR TEA GOWN STUFFS

REDUCED IN PRICE.

At the Black Goods counter is a Nuns Veiling and a Baptiste, both 38 inches wide, all wool, and light weight, 37½c, imported this season to sell for 50c.

All-wool Indistinct Stripes, 40 inches wide, with dashes of bourette through them; a seasonable weight fabric, 60c, worth 90c.

French Figured Cashmere for parlor Tea Gowns. The shapes, the tints, the hang of bud and blossom, the droop and turn of leaf in the decorations are so sunlitly that a butterfly might mistake them for those earth-nursed and dew-kissed.

Seekers for bargains in Gloves, Hosiery, Underwear, Corsets and Ribbons should read what we put in type. Dealers and consumers need to note sharply and act promptly.

It remained for this season to show the most delicate and elegant Fans and Parasols. The first introduction this week to new materials and new shapes. A choicer lot than ours is not in existence.

Quick Facilities of Distribution Necessary.

You must keep close watch on the White Goods if you'd know every newness. Fresh arrivals almost daily. Shipments received Saturday gives accumulated attractions to an already unapproached variety. A newly developed rage for Swisses prompted us to secure a huge collection of popular styles. Chaste, sheer, neat fabrics that'll delight every daughter of Eve.

Only on the threshold of warm weather yet all the bright, light weaves have received an ovation. As this department becomes better known it acquires firmer fame. If you look beyond the glamour of promiscuous statements flung together in today's paper you will become convinced that the largest service, the largest stock, and the largest price shrinkage is here. Consult the adjacent quotations intelligently.

The most mellifluous sentences we can formulate, the most graceful expressions we can command, the sincerest pride we can assert, all fail to adequately describe the novel beauty and cheapness of our Embroideries. Styles unlike all others. Each piece is absolutely exclusive—to be found only here. A victory of organization, due to astute knowledge of buying. We don't invite you to a meagre miscellany of maimed lengths, but to a multitude of new, bouyant things that you can buy blindfolded without a mistrust. If you are familiar with their worth this week's prices will cause the intensest enthusiasm, and thrill trade with original vigor. Some decidedly special bargains in a great variety of narrow and medium width Edgings. Monday will finish them.

THE SLAYING OF DR. J. B. S. HOLMES.

The Trial of Dr. J. B. S. Holmes Brings Out Some New Developments-The Evidence All in-The Argument.

Rome, Ga., April 19.—[Special.]—The evidence in the Holmes case is all in and the court has taken a rest until Monday. Through five days the investigation has dragged its tedious length, and at the close the status of the matter does not differ much from what it was at the start. Though the case has been thoroughly worked up on both sides, it has never been much of a case. Since the investigation before the coroner's jury little new light has been thrown upon the cause that led up to the homicide, or upon the actual occurrence itself. The life of the defendant has never been considered in jeopardy by those conversant with the facts brought out in the inquest, but there have been many who thought the matter sufficiently in doubt to demand a thorough and impartial investigation. It was the opinion of perhaps the majority that the good of the community demanded that Dr. Holmes' conduct be subjected to the searching scrutiny of a legal investigation before it be pronounced justifiable. The wisdom of this Dr. Holmes' friends doubtless realize as the trial draws to a close. The public sentiment of Chhattanooga county, once bitter even to the verge of violence, against Dr. Holmes, has steadily demanded a trial, and now that the investigation is drawing to a close, there are evidences that this public sentiment is in a large measure appeased.

CLEARING UP THE CLOUDS.
To illustrate, a citizen of Chhattanooga county said to Captain R. G. Clark: "I came down here wanting to see Dr. Holmes hung, but after listening to the evidence, I go back a Holmes man. I would not have stood it as long as he did."

It is well, however, for the memory of the dead, that Mr. Steel's testimony was introduced this morning. Though he seemed to be possessed of a mania about Dr. Holmes, he was, as a rule, genial in social intercourse and agreeable in the transaction of business, although fault has been found with his management of the factory.

Mr. Steel's evidence shows that D. F. Algood stood ready to secure his overdrifts by pledging his stock and conveying the mineral land to a trustee for the factory. The evidence also shows that when Mr. Algood at one time became convinced that he was wrong in accusing Dr. Holmes of trying to oust him from the place which he considered his birthright, he went to the doctor, and in a manly way made acknowledgment and asked him to give him his hand. But the old mania again took possession of his mind and led him to his death.

It seems to me one of the saddest cases that ever occurred. It is hard to believe that D. F. Algood was not a non-maniac on this subject. How a well balanced mind could have been so long and desperately possessed of a delusion, in spite of so much evidence to the contrary, is a mystery.

MR. STEEL'S TESTIMONY.
The state reserved Mr. Steel's testimony for its parting shot. The important part of it was that Mr. Algood tendered Mr. Marsh his stock and a deed to his mineral land to secure his overdrift, and Mr. Marsh said that was all right. The witness went on to say that after the family meeting on Sunday he went back to the factory and told Mr. Algood his mother and sisters were coming up to appeal to him for a peaceable settlement with Dr. Holmes. He then urged him to make friends with Dr. Holmes and assured him that Dr. Holmes was his friend.

"Said he, 'there is one thing I can't do. I can't get down on my knees to Dr. Holmes.' Said I, 'nobody wants you to do that, but you will make friends with him for your mother's sake. She is getting old and you ought to make your mother's last days as pleasant as possible. Won't you make friends with Dr. Holmes?'"

"Said he, 'I will see you again this afternoon.' Some man called him to the store, just then and he went and talked with the man in the store.
"Mr. Steel says that about thirty minutes before train time the following conversation occurred between himself and Mr. Algood:
"He said: 'I have telephoned mother and the girls not to come up this afternoon, and I have telegraphed Mr. Ed (Mr. Marsh) to come up to Rome tonight on the same business that he was on yesterday. I am going down to Rome, and I am going to settle up this business in a business way and get this matter settled.'"

"Said I: 'Mr. Algood, you are going to Rome on very important business, and I want to ask you to be certain that you keep perfectly calm; I mean by that you are not to get excited.'"

"Said he: 'That is true, and I am not going to.' He pulled his watch out and said: 'It's just about fifteen or sixteen minutes till train time, and he jumped on his horse with my left hand and laid his right on the pommel of the saddle, and said to him: 'Don't you forget what I have told you.'"

"Said he, 'I am not, I am going to do exactly like my wife has told me to do. You have told me, and you will see that this business will be all right when I come back.'"

"Well, said I, 'Mr. Algood, go, and he rode down the street at a fast pace.'"

A TALK WITH HOLMES.
Mr. Steel testified that he saw Mr. Algood at the Armstrong hotel after he was killed and there were no shot in his face. He then swore to the following conversation between himself and Dr. Holmes the day after the killing:

"I saw Dr. Holmes twice. In the morning soon after I got to the hotel, I went to see Dr. Holmes. He said to me, 'Mr. Steel, that is a bad thing.' I said yes, it was. He said he was sorry it happened, and I remarked to him, 'Doctor, if I had been here he never would have been shot.' Said he, 'I wish you could have been.'"

"Said I, 'I wish to God I had been here. If I had you never would have killed him.'"

"I then left the room to look after the funeral. Then at night again, after everything was arranged for the funeral, my son said to me: 'Have you seen the Doctor since morning?' Said I, 'I have not.' I am very tired and I think I will go home.'"

"If I were you I would go and see the doctor.'"

"Then I went to the doctor's room and found him lying down in his bed just like he was in the morning. He shook hands with me, and said: 'That was a bad thing, but it's done now, Mr. Steel, and it can't be helped; and I hope they will put you in charge of the business up there, and everything will go on all right.'"

"To this I made no reply."
"Then he said: 'Mr. Steel, you will do me the justice to say that you have never heard me say a hard word of Dr. Holmes.'"

"Yes, doctor, I said, 'I do that.'"

"Mr. Steel, if you had been in my place wouldn't you have done just like I did?"

"No, doctor, I would not."
Then said he: 'If you had seen DeForest approaching you with a pistol in his hand and aimed at the carriage window, wouldn't you have thought you were justified in shooting him?'"

"Said I, 'No, doctor, you can't make me say that.'"

After a moment Mr. Steel added:
"There was a little more conversation that I have omitted." Said I, 'circumstances alter cases, and you might have been surrounded by circumstances that might have caused you to think you were justified in doing it; but I don't know what the circumstances were surrounding the case."

Mr. Steel testified that Mr. Algood bought the Penn place, which joined the factory land, to keep Mr. Williamson and others from building a town there, as barrooms might be put up, and bring bad neighbors. For this he gave $18,000, and had paid $10,000 of the money. He thought this accounted for part of the overdrifts on Mr. Algood's account.

MR. COOPER'S EVIDENCE.
Mr. E. A. Cooper, proprietor of the Armstrong, swore that Mrs. Holmes asked him to let her know when Mr. Algood registered. He did so on the evening of the 20th, and she asked him to send for a policeman, which he did. This evidence was ruled out.

A state asked for seven hours argument and that time was given both sides. The argument will be made by Colonel J. I. Wright, Mr. L. A. Dean and Colonel Hammond in Chhattanooga, and by Mr. Seab Wright, Colonel W. H. Dabney and Judge Branham in that order.

In Dr. Holmes' statement, that part which mentioned his request to Mr. Alf Hammond when he thought either he or DeForest Algood must be killed, the doctor was overcome by his emotion and for a moment or two, could hardly speak. Many in the audience also were effected and there were many moist eyes.

One of the most affecting passages of the statement was where Dr. Holmes said that as his carriage approached the office he looked up to the window of his room on the second floor of the hotel and saw his wife throw open the blinds; then as his eyes fell they rested on Mr. Algood, who in a moment faced him with his hand on the pistol, the butt of which glinted in the electric light. W. G. COOPER.

THE LADIES' FAIR.
The ladies' fair at Centennial hall increases in interest and success each evening. During the week a large number have visited the fair, and each evening the entertainment offered has been of a most enjoyable character.

Tomorrow evening an exhibition drill will be given by the Atlanta Rifles, and an unusually large crowd is expected to turn out to witness the exhibition by our crack company. Other special features will be introduced during the week.
Each evening a large number of handsome articles are raffled off, adding to the enjoyment of the lucky ones. Delicious refreshments are served by lovely young ladies, and all the time one of the most attractive that has been given in Atlanta for some time.

THE MAY MANTEL COMPANY.
A New Company Organized and Elects Officers.
The May Mantel company, for which a charter was sent by the superior court March 8th, 1890, was organized April 17th, last Thursday, and the following officers were elected: Geo. S. May, president; M. P. May, vice-president; R. R. Hairston, secretary and general manager; C. W. Smith, attorney.

The new company will engage in the same line of business formerly carried on by Geo. S. May & Co. They will make extensive improvements by the addition of new and improved machinery and the erection of a large three-story building for the accommodation of their fast increasing trade.

SEVEN YEARS A CRIPPLE.
Cured by Dr. Evans by a Few Magnetic Treatments—Also Other Astonishing Cases.

DEBILITATED FOR ONE YEAR.—Dr. Evans visited my wife who has been completely bedridden from female weakness, paralysis and nervous exhaustion, and gave her one magnetic treatment, which so far restored her that she arose from her bed the next morning and walked around the room, and in a few days she was able to take a carriage and visit the doctor at his office. She has visited him here at his office, and is now quite a well woman, requiring only a little more time to build up her wasted and exhausted system, and we would be pleased to have anyone who is desirous to learn for themselves the apparent miracle Dr. Evans has wrought on her.

60 Foundry St., with Winslow Machine Co., on Georgia Pacific railroad, was for years a terrible sufferer from piles, also catarrh of the rectum, and in two weeks without pain or other inconvenience. This gentleman will reply to any inquiries addressed to the above post-office.

Rev. A. W. Walker, residing at Westminster, Ga., was cured of total deafness of one ear, and also extreme nervous exhaustion, which had incapacitated him for any manual or physical labor for two years, may be referred to.

Mrs. Lindsey, 28 Formwalt street, stated that when she applied to Dr. Evans she was totally deaf in the right ear and quite deaf in the left for the past eight years, and that by a few magnetic treatments Dr. Evans restored her hearing so that she could now hear almost as well as ever.

Mrs. H. stated that for twelve years she had suffered constantly from extreme nervousness, accompanied by constant pain in the head and spine, also other weaknesses of which she had been a victim for a few magnetic treatments by Dr. Evans, which she permits through gratitude to the doctor and in the interest of the afflicted.

Dr. M. C. Fulton, an old and esteemed resident of Decatur, also stated that he had been deaf for the past seven or eight years, until he applied to Dr. Evans a few weeks ago, and now he could hear almost as well as ever could.

References also made to the following prominent business gentlemen of the city: Captain M. J. Barnes, commission merchant, place of business is South Forsyth street; Mr. Joseph L. Castleberry, residence 104 West Peters street; Mr. J. A. McCandless, photographer, 35 Pryor street, and scores of others of the best known citizens of Atlanta.

Dr. Evans can be consulted at his parlors, 33 North Forsyth street, from 10 a. m. until 7 p. m. each day, for a considerable time to come. Consultation free.

HENRY WATERSON.

HE WORKED HERE IN ATLANTA DURING THE WAR.

On Refugee Papers—First on the Chattahoochee Rebel and Then on the Southern Confederacy.

Henry Waterson, during the siege of Atlanta, and for some months preceding that crisis, was one of the most familiar forms to be seen on the streets of Atlanta.

There are a number of citizens living here now that knew him then, and cherish a kindly recollection of the slender, sorrow-faced, brilliant young journalist.

Colonel G. W. Adair was speaking of Waterson yesterday.

"I think he came here," he said, "in the early part of '64. My recollection is that he and John Roberts came here with Haldeman, of the Louisville Journal. He worked here for Paul's 'Rebel,' the Chattahoochee paper, and for the Memphis Appeal. At that time J. Henry Smith and I were publishing the Southern Confederacy, and Waterson did a good deal of writing for our paper, too."

"He was a sort of Bohemian in those days, a brilliant and versatile writer, and a good companion. Everybody knew him, and he was at home anywhere. When we sold the Southern Confederacy to Mr. E. W. Marsh and Mr. John H. James, Waterson was made managing editor of that paper."

When the Confederacy refused to Macon, its editor divided his time pretty evenly between Macon and Atlanta. He was liked by almost every officer in the army. Ison G. Harris, the war-governor of Tennessee, and at present a senator from that state, was a good friend of his. So were General Cleburne, General Hood, General Hardee, General Quarles, and all of them, Waterson was a welcome guest wherever he went. He served as a sort of freelance aide-de-camp on the staff of first one general and then another, and was a generally privileged character.

"On the night before the city was taken, Governor Harris, who was my guest, Waterson and his chum Roberts, DeBar, the Press man, Hood and I, all left together. Roberts will be remembered best, perhaps, by his nom de plume of 'John Happy.' We went by way of McDonough to Lovejoy station, and there the party broke up. I went to join Forrest's Cavalry and he went to Macon to take care of his Southern Confederacy."

It was a long time after the war before Mr. Waterson came back here. As he became famous in Louisville, Atlanta people recalled his part in the siege, and in the smoke-wreathed picture of those days he is always given a part.

About ten years ago he passed through Atlanta on a lecturing tour.

It is needless to say that he was given a royal welcome, and made many new friends.

For a long while past Mr. Waterson has been going to the National Democratic conventions as a delegate from the state-at-large.

"I remember him very well from an acquaintance formed at the convention of 1888," said Mr. Jack Spaulding a few days ago. He is now about 55 years old apparently, with iron gray hair, moustache, and goatee. "He is about the medium height, sturdy, vigorous, impulsive. He was chairman of the committee on platform in that convention, and made a fine speech when the platform was read. He's a nervous man, noticeably so, strong and vigorous in what he says. I remember an expression of his that might be termed characteristic."

We have presented you a platform upon which all democrats can stand without looking around the corner.

"You know he has only one eye. The injured eye is kept almost entirely closed."

"Waterson's father was present during the convention—not as a delegate, but just to look on. He is one of the old time politicians and is, perhaps, the best living type of the American politician of a half century ago. His reminiscences would make a most interesting biographical cyclopedia. He used to do a great deal of writing for the Courier-Journal under the signature 'Old Fog.'"

"I believe it was Ed Fog that said Waterson was running a sixteen-column paper in an eight-column town. Waterson's reply was that he would keep on at it until Louisville became a sixteen-column town, and then he would move up a peg or two. There is no doubt that he has done an incalculable amount of good for his city. His paper has contributed more than any other one factor to make Louisville a 16-column town."

There are several men in THE CONSTITUTION composing room that have set type for his paper, and remember Waterson.

Only last night Henry Saloshin threw down a discarded and almost illegible piece of copy, with the remark, "That looks like Henry Waterson."

"How is that?" he was asked.

"You can't read it, that's show. Waterson's copy is worse than Horace Greeley's. Every little while a printer would be fired out of the composing room for belling his copy. It was horrible. His editorials always went through a regular course of proof reading, and then came out hap-hazard."

"There was one old printer in the office in 1886 that had been connected with the Journal and Courier-Journal for fifty years, and he was the only man that could read Mr. Waterson's copy."

"He writes with ink, and sprays, and scratches, and blots, like a school boy. We used to dread his copy."

Money and Morals.
The subject is wide enough for the brilliant versatility of the lecturer, and his talk will be a disordered and almost illegible piece of copy, with the remark, "That looks like Henry Waterson."

A HOME INSTITUTION.

The United Underwriters' Insurance Company is in New Office—A Few Points About the Company.

The United Underwriters' Insurance company began business the first of the year, and the success the company has already achieved is indicative of the great future it has before it.

The people of the south, and especially of Atlanta, are realizing what it is to patronize home institutions. Having been forced to pay out so much money to foreign companies for benefits that could be obtained with equal security at home, they have made a change in this direction, which will greatly aid to the material prosperity of our section.

The "United Underwriters" is more than a local company. Its stockholders are scattered over nine states, and it is now doing business in Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, and in a short time will cover the greater part of the south. It has the largest capital of any insurance company ever organized in Georgia, and intends, within the next few years, to do the largest business of any southern company.

As to its officers and directors, they are among Georgia's best known citizens. The president, Mr. Joel Hurt, has a reputation for prudent financial management second to none in the state, and is known all over the country as a prominent underwriter. Mr. J. R. Nutting, the secretary, is one of the best known and most popular of Atlanta's younger business men.

The manager of agencies, Mr. Edward A. Swain, was for a number of years in charge of the work of the underwriters' agency of New York, and is probably the most popular insurance man in the south, and certainly one of the most accomplished. It is not the desire of THE CONSTITUTION to give undue praise to any institution, but we feel a just and pardonable pride in the United Underwriters' Insurance company. It is founded on the right principles, it is managed by brainy men, it is a home institution, and we must endorse it to the fullest extent.

Mr. Harvey Johnson is in charge of the local department, and will give the most careful attention to any business with which he may be entrusted. The company's office is in the Traders' Bank building, rooms 5 and 6.

If you have any insurance to place, give the "United Underwriters" a call.

DEALS IN DIRT.

Twenty-five beautiful lots on Copenhill to be sold.

Property That Will Doubles Double in Value Within a Year—A Few Points of Interest About Them, and the Great Sale Next Tuesday.

The sale of the beautiful residence lots on Copenhill, which will take place on Tuesday, April 23d, has created considerable inquiry in real estate circles. Hundreds of people have visited the grounds since the sale was first announced, and all come back charmed and surprised at the wonderful improvement made to an already beautiful spot. Even now it presents the appearance of a lovely park. High, elevated lots, symmetrically graded, terraced and dotted on the eminent points and picturesque park spots and silvery lakes occupy the vales. Nothing that money could accomplish has been spared on this property, and the owners intend to continue the work until it really becomes the suburb of Atlanta.

It is accessible by one of the most convenient electric lines in the city, which has its city terminus on Broad street, and continues out to Houston and Highland avenue to this property then on to Piedmont park.

Ample facilities have been provided to carry out the large crowd expected. Special electric cars will leave the city terminus at 2:15, 2:30, 2:45 and 3.

Everybody is invited to attend this auction, which will be conducted by Colonel G. W. Adair, which is in itself a guarantee of a fair square sale.

MARRIED.

ENRIGHT-SOKER.—In New York city, on Tuesday, April 8th, by Rev. Father Hagan, Miss Soutto B. Enright, of Atlanta, Ga., and Joseph H. Soker, of Long Branch.

MERCHANT.—The friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Merchant, and W. L. Hubbard and family, are requested to attend the funeral of Miss Gertrude Merchant, this afternoon at 3 o'clock, from the First Methodist church. The following bearers are requested to meet promptly at H. M. Patterson's office at 3 p. m.: P. A. O'Connor, Clarence Tappan, J. C. Rushing, T. A. Hardwick, Eugene S. White, E. V. Baisden.

A WIREGRASS KING.

Who Is Making Money and Friends at a Rapid Rate—A Trip to Hawkinsville—A Wonderful Country.

Hawkinsville is determined to extend its railroad facilities.

It is people have determined that they will have more railroads, and the enthusiasm which they have undertaken the work of establishing new connections makes it only a question of time before they get what they want.

During the past week Colonel R. F. Maddox, Mr. George V. Gress, Mr. H. L. Hayden and Captain E. P. Howell, of Atlanta, were invited to attend the grand railroad rally which had been arranged for Wednesday in Hawkinsville. These gentlemen were present and have returned to Atlanta enthused with their trip.

Hawkinsville is naturally one of the best located towns in Georgia. It is situated in a fine agricultural region, at the head of navigation on the Ocmulgee river, not very far from the geographical center of the state, and in a very healthy part of the state. The town is located on the west side of this river and the surrounding country is an expanse of gently undulating hills overlooking the valley of the river. The town has a splendid water supply for domestic and fire purposes. It is well laid off, and has several beautiful homes and substantial business houses. But Hawkinsville is not growing nor is its real estate enhancing as its enterprising people would have, and as should be.

The place has depended too long on river navigation, which is too slow for this fast age. In the first place, the Macon and Brunswick, now part of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad system, was built ten miles west of Hawkinsville, which afterwards got a branch road. Then the Georgia, Florida and Southern railroad was built fifteen miles west of them, taking a large part of the trade from Dooly and other counties along the line of that road. The result is that big planters on both sides of the town have suffered by not being on a main line, and they have at last determined to make a main line for themselves.

They desire to build a road from Hawkinsville due south, through the counties of Wilcox, Irwin, Coffee, and other counties, to make the best southern connection possible for Florida and south Atlantic points. Then they want a northern connection with the Atlanta and Florida railroad. The line they propose to build runs through the best timber lands in the state for over seventy miles, indeed it is almost an unbroken forest of pine trees from ten miles below Hawkinsville to the Florida line. A proposition has been made to the people of Hawkinsville, by capitalists, that if they will raise twenty-five thousand dollars, and seventy-five thousand in addition is raised along the line, that all the money needed to build the road will be furnished on bonds of the road sufficient to do both. The one hundred thousand will be raised. Hawkinsville will raise the twenty-five thousand required, and the seventy-five thousand is just as certain to be raised, when the road will be commenced and rapidly completed, provided the people of Hawkinsville and along the proposed line do not let their order cool off.

When they do commence work they will receive attention from the two ends of the line, that will insure a line through Georgia, with Hawkinsville as an important city on the route.

After the Hawkinsville meeting the Atlanta party, with Captain R. W. Anderson, of Hawkinsville, accepted an invitation from Mr. George V. Gress to ride through the country in carriages from Hawkinsville to his new mill now being constructed on the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery railroad, four miles east of Rochelle, the distance being about thirty miles. Colonel Maddox, who has been through nearly all of Georgia but this part, says he never enjoyed a trip more than this one, and he is delighted with the country and its splendid timber resources. For miles the country is covered with the finest pine timber in the world. The land that has been cleared, and there is very little that has been, is very fertile and easily cultivated.

The idea that some of the party had that the wiregrass part of the state is very poor and unproductive, was dissipated. Some day it will be the most densely populated part of the state, and after the timber is converted into lumber, and the ground prepared for cultivation properly, the yield in fruit and field crops will not only astonish the natives, but the balance of the world. Think of a farmer making five hundred gallons of the finest ribbon cane syrup to the acre and four hundred bushels of sweet potatoes to the acre, yet this is not at all uncommon in this section. It is the poor man's paradise, and there is no part of the world where a man can make a living with so little work. It is not unusual to find a man who kills from fifty to a hundred hogs who makes no pretense at farming, and whose hogs are as fat as though Kentucky bred, and can be raised with less trouble and expense than in north Georgia, Tennessee or Kentucky. The truth is, wherever the forest is cleared and cultivated it yields immense crops of corn, potatoes, ground peas, cow peas and sugar cane and oats grow wild in this wiregrass country. The people who pay any attention to cattle-raising make money. With a single exception of wheat, almost any food crop that is cultivated in the United States can be raised there.

Such a country as the wire-grass region of Georgia, situated in the west would be filled up in two months as rapidly as the bleak and disappointing territory of Oklahoma was last year, and those who were there would stay.

One man who is intensely enthusiastic on this part of Georgia, and who has done more in a practical way, to bring its merits into notice is Mr. George V. Gress, now one of the leading public spirited citizens of Atlanta, and I take this occasion to give him a more extended introduction to the people of Georgia, and to commend his example to young men who are looking for a place to make a fortune.

Mr. Gress came to Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1870, from the northern part of Pennsylvania. He was educated at the New York law school, and was a lawyer, and was only twenty-one years old when he came south. His fortune was only in his head and hands. He had had considerable experience, even as a boy, in the lumber business in Pennsylvania and New York; knew all about the saw mill business and was a good mechanic. Not having money to go into business, he made a contract with a mill at Chattanooga to furnish hands for the mill, and cut lumber at so much per thousand. He remained there for three years, did some hard work and saved up a little money. Mr. David R. Wadley, who was one of the largest lumber men in Georgia at that time, needed a man to assist him in managing his mills near Jessup, Ga., and after corresponding with friends in different parts of the country centered on Mr. Gress as the man he wanted.

He wrote to him at Chattanooga, and finally secured his services. The panic of 1873 greatly injured the lumber business all over the south and it was not paying. Mr. Gress went to Jessup and commenced work with Mr. Wadley on a mill that was then considered the best in the state. It was cutting ten thousand feet of lumber a day, and could be pushed to a capacity of twelve thousand feet a day. When Mr. Gress took the mill he commenced to make improvements and to increase the yield. After he had been there two months the mill was cutting twenty thousand feet. Mr. Gress continued to make improvements and Mr. Wadley was busy selling the lumber. As the demand for lumber increased, and Mr. Wadley saw what Mr. Gress was doing, he asked him if he could increase the output of the mill.

"I can," said Mr. Gress; "if you will keep me in timber."

Mr. Wadley then concluded to shut down his other mill, and to center all his hands and teams on this one. Mr. Gress was as good as his word, and ran the output up to forty thousand feet per day. Mr. Gress was fortunate to be thrown with David E. Wadley, who was to the saw mill business of Georgia, just what his distinguished brother, William M., was to the railroads of the state. He was a good judge of a man, careful in trading, and perfectly fair in his dealings.

After he had accumulated a fortune of three hundred thousand dollars in the business, he retired on account of his health, in 1880. Mr. Gress, who had in the meantime married in the south, was able to purchase one-third interest in the business with the money he had saved from the wages paid him by Mr. Wadley. Mr. Wadley sold one of his mills to A. B. Steele & Co. Mr. Gress being the company and owning one-third interest. Mr. Steele was a son-in-law of Mr. Wadley. After working together for two or three years, Mr. Steele sold his two-third interest to Mr. Gress for thirty-six thousand dollars, payable one thousand dollars per month until it was paid. This was about two years from the time he had come to Georgia, and nearly all the time he had been working for a salary, and had been closely confined to the mill.

Lumber men thought then he had overvalued himself—that he had bought an old mill and paid more for it than it was worth now. One of them, who met Mr. Gress soon after the trade was made, asked him in rather a merry manner:

"Young man, don't you think you have bit off more than you can chew?"

"Well, I'll chew it," said Mr. Gress, as he hurried on to catch the train to return to his mill that needed his attention. Speaking about this start, Mr. Gress says:

"I made up my mind to succeed with the enterprise, but I could not help hearing occasionally some intimation that while I was a good man to run a saw mill, I was a poor trader. I knew I understood the business and that I thought a great deal more of the country than I got credit for. I did not talk much, but I went back to my mill and immediately mapped out $20,000 worth of additional improvements. I had part of the money, for I had bought the mill on a credit, and had nearly forty months to pay for it. I put in the improvements as rapidly as I could make them, and for eighteen months I put in the hardest work of my life, and in less than twenty months I had discounted all my notes, paid for my mill, and for the improvements."

Since then Mr. Gress has been steadily increasing his business, and today he has a plant at Greystone, in Dodge county, on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, that is one of the best managed mills in the south. He has twelve miles of railroad track running back into the interior for timber. He has constructed large kilns for drying timber, has added planing mills for making weatherboarding, flooring, ceiling, and finishing lumber, and has accumulated a large fortune.

No man in the business has made more practical improvements in the trade than has Mr. Gress, both in the saw mill business and in the sale and classification of lumber. He has extended the sale of Georgia pine lumber until in many places it is a necessity where it was not known a few years ago. The demand is increasing each year, and it will eventually monopolize the business.

The first investment Mr. Gress made in Atlanta was in 1885. "I came to Atlanta to settle up my notes for the purchase of the mill," he said, "and while here there was a land sale, and I bought some lots. I held them six months and sold them at a profit of one thousand dollars; that fixed me on Atlanta property."

Since then he has made some large investments in Atlanta property, and is buying whenever he has money to invest. His property has greatly enhanced in value since he bought it, and will continue to do so. He has made his investments judiciously.

One would think that what we have written about the success of Mr. Gress was enough for one man to accomplish in a life time, but he has just begun. In the seventeen years he has spent in Georgia he has made friends without number, and he has made plenty of money. But he is now engaged in the largest enterprise of his life. About two years ago he concluded to enlarge his business—and his mill. He went quietly to work to find a body of timber that would suit him. He bought up forty thousand acres of the finest timber land in the state in Irwin and Wilcox counties. He owns four miles front on the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery railroad, four miles from Rochelle and between that place and Abbeville, and he is now erecting a mill two hundred feet long, fifty feet wide, and two stories high. In ninety days the mill will be cutting one hundred and fifty thousand feet of lumber per day. He is building kilns there to dry his lumber at the rate of fifty thousand feet per day, and will later on build planing mills and put in other machinery that will make it the completest mill ever built in the south.

"I have laid out and will invest in this plant," said Mr. Gress, "over one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. I am going to make it before I get done with it as good as the best mill I ever saw, and I have seen a great many. I have here in this body timber enough to last me twenty years, provided I do not saw more than one hundred and fifty thousand feet per day, and I will make this mill net me from sixty to eighty thousand dollars per annum."

The forty thousand acres of land that Mr. Gress owns could not be purchased for five dollars per acre from him, and he got it for less than one dollar per acre.

"This wire grass region," said Mr. Gress, "I consider a most desirable country to live in. It is so easy to make a living here. When I get my big mill to work, I am going to pull up the stumps here on two or three hundred acres and make me an experimental farm, just to show the people of the up country what we can raise down here."

It is a pleasure to see a man who can handle his business with as much ease as Mr. Gress does. There is not as much friction in his large business, in all its details, as there is on many two-horse farms in this state. The men who work for him, like him, and respect him; he pays good wages, requiring hard work, and the men get their pay without fail on pay day. He is not pompous or puffed up, but is a fair, square man in all his dealings, and has that reputation among all the men who have dealt with him. Not only this, but Mr. Gress, since he has been in business, has learned a dozen young men who have worked under him how to make money in the saw mill business, and they have been advised and assisted by him with the keenest interest.

Mark our prediction: The wire grass region of Georgia will some day be the most populous part of our state, and George V. Gress, if he lives, will be one of the richest men in the south. He is now one of our most liberal and progressive citizens, and men of his make-up are always lucky and happy. If they are not they ought to be.

JOHN SMITH'S CARRIAGES.

Captain T. B. Neal Has One, and He Says It Is the Best in the State of Georgia.

"That is the best carriage in the state of Georgia," said Captain T. B. Neal the other day, referring to a fine Victoria that bore the name plate of John M. Smith, Atlanta's famous carriage builder.

It pays to buy a John Smith vehicle. A short time ago Captain Neal's wife drove out to Oakland cemetery in the Victoria he was speaking about. Mrs. Neal and her driver left the carriage to attend to the shrubbery on the Neal lot. While they were engaged, the horse became frightened and ran away. At the east side of the cemetery there is a perpendicular embankment fifteen feet high. The horses headed toward this, and could not stop in time to avoid taking the terrible leap.

One horse was killed instantly, and the other badly injured. The John Smith Victoria stood the racket, though. Not an injury was done it except the breaking of one front wheel. It seems impossible that such a fall should not have mangled it literally to atoms.

No wonder Captain Neal says that John Smith, who has moved to his commodious new quarters, 100 and 102 Wheat street, makes the best carriages in Georgia.

THE PAN-AMERICANS.

THEY WISH TO MEET SOUTHERN LADIES.

The Programme of the Day They Will Spend in Atlanta—Two Reception to Be Given.

The Pan American congress will reach Atlanta next Thursday morning.

The business men of the city are determined that they shall receive every possible attention and at the same time they wish to comply with the wishes of the visitors.

A letter received yesterday stated plainly what the desires of the Pan-Americans are. It was stated by the correspondent, who is in daily communication with the Pan-Americans, that they did not wish to be banquets.

The letter plainly stated that the South Americans are weary of banquets. They have, however, heard much of the beauty and charm of the southern ladies and they asked that an opportunity might be given them to meet some of the ladies of Atlanta.

The programme of the day has been arranged as follows: The Pan-Americans will arrive at 9 o'clock, and will be met by a committee and escorted to the Kimball house where a breakfast will be prepared for them. At 11 o'clock another committee will call for the visitors in carriages and will drive them first to the state capitol and then to the cotton factories and other places of commercial interest about the city. After visiting the Technological school the party arrive at the Piedmont driving club about 2:30. After lunch, which will be taken at the club house, the visitors will be brought back to the hotel, arriving at about 4 o'clock.

At 6 o'clock dinner will be served, and in the evening a reception will be held in the Kimball house parlors. Several of the leading society ladies of Atlanta have consented to receive the guests, and the entertainment will be a brilliant one.

There is also a plan to hold another reception at the Capital City Club.

The Pan-Americans will leave on the midnight train.

The Committee Appointed.

The following notice has been issued by Mr. James F. O'Neill, chairman of the general committee:

Atlanta, Ga., April 19.—The following committees are appointed to serve in the matter of entertaining the Pan-American congress on their trip to Atlanta:

EDISON'S TALKING DOLL.

It is on Exhibition at the China Store of Dobbie, Wey & Co., on Peachtree Street.

A doll that talks plainly.

Did you ever think such a thing would be invented? It doesn't make any difference whether you did or not. It has been invented and is called the Edison Talking Doll. It is about twenty-five inches high and looks very much like life. The doll recites "Mary Had a Little Lamb" with great accuracy. In fact, it has a list of a dozen or more pieces that it recites for the gratification of those who will call and see it. "Old Mother Hubbard," "Jack and Jill," "Little Bo Peep" and a number of other pieces are repeated with wonderful precision. It is a wonderful little instrument, and shows what art and science has done for the amusement of the young. Mr. H. B. Wey, of the firm of Dobbie & Wey, has been in New York for several weeks, and returned yesterday evening, bringing with him this little curiosity. All who desire to see it can do so by calling at the store of Dobbie & Wey, on Peachtree.

Notice.

MADDOX, RUCKER & CO., BANKERS.

Having added $50,000 to our banking property, we are now arranging to move our office on the corner of our block, where we will be in a more prominent position, with better facilities, and we now propose to give more attention to the banking department of our business.

We solicit the accounts of banks, merchants and individuals, and will extend every accommodation consistent with sound banking.

We will negotiate loans on marketable securities. Allow interest on time deposits.

Having repeated requests from various sources, to buy and sell stocks and bonds, we have concluded to deal generally in miscellaneous securities.

We will buy and sell on commission, state, municipal and railroad bonds, and all kinds of stocks. We can place first-class investment securities to advantage, and we invite proposals from cities and counties, when issuing bonds.

We do a general banking business and invite correspondence.

NOTES AND NEWS OF SOCIETY.

What Has Been Going on in the Fashionable World and What This Week Will Bring Forth.

With the exception of the cotton on Monday night and the beautiful German on Thursday evening, in honor of Misses Spelman, Marshall and Grant, society was extremely quiet last week. The first warm days find people busily anticipating the warmer ones to come and preparing for the season which comes with the heated season. That is, some people are preparing to go. Others who think themselves the more sensible, say no place renders better attractions in the summer than Atlanta, and they remain, preferring the comfort of home to the intense discomfort of the average summer resort.

The principal events of this week are the two weddings which are to be celebrated on Wednesday evening. The marriage of Miss Mabel Clarke to Mr. Harvey Johnson has been announced. The other wedding to be celebrated that evening will be that of Miss Sallie Sanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Sanders, to Mr. James R. Hickey. Despite the fact that this will be a quiet home wedding, it is looked forward to with great interest as being the union of two of Atlanta's most popular young society people.

During the past week an art reception has been held by Mrs. Selma Cole Hill, at her studios in the "Traders' building," for the purpose of showing the friends of the Georgia institute the progress made by the pupils during the winter term. The delicately tinted walls were covered with free-hand drawings in charcoal, of conventional designs, geometrical soft and still life, showing the progression from elementary principles to those more advanced.

In crayon work and charcoal, some very fine things have been done by Miss Edeline Edwards, her subjects being ideal heads. Miss Cole's copy of "Cascades with the Water Tower," after Van Rungdale, is a beautifully executed copy of this famous picture. Miss Mabel Robinson and Master Carlton Wetake, both of whom are but eight years old, have displayed wonderful proficiency in their work, proving conclusively what Mrs. Hill urges so strongly—that children can be taught in this art with marked success as well as in any other.

The little girls' drawings are chiefly from nature, while Master Carlton has confined himself closely to animals, the horse in particular. Other pupils who have done really excellent work are the Misses Alice Dixon, Eugenie Stephens, Willie Nash, May Smith, Nellie Dwyer, Edith Stephens and Mabel Whitney. Miss Crouse displayed some very fine work in a large panel of "Marching Niles roses and birds." Miss Edwards has a little gem in a small study of daffodils in its various shades of yellow, and a small landscape representing a Dutch scene.

Mrs. Hall has decided to make Atlanta her home, since she is meeting with unbounded success. Her class is very large. Now and then a promise to call for more space and one or two capable assistants.

A great deal is said of the folly of following the fashions in their extremes of giving up one's time and thought to such affairs—but a great deal more would be said if one did not follow them at all. Perhaps the oldest of all fashions is to find fault, and the habit of doing so undoubtedly occasions the production of new styles which creates so much bewilderment. Just now it is the fashion for my lady to be healthful and clean, and against such a commendable "fad" no adverse criticism can be made. So she exercises, bathes, rides and drives as much and as often as her fancy wills her, and grows with each day handsomer and more fresh looking, until the mother rivals the daughter in youth. In matters of personal beauty, the eye is a most important member to be considered since the "window of the soul" becomes as well the reflex of the physical condition. Every human being is inclined to rub the eyes on awakening, and a more injurious practice cannot be found. If possible, have near at hand, a little water and a soft sponge and before rising bathe the eyes gently with this. Once or twice a week, bathe the eyes in salt and water, and occasionally when the eyes are rather dull, a little orange peel juice squeezed into them at night will give them brilliancy without injury. Three eyes may be bathed in a solution of alum and rose water, and an early sleep be taken to restore brilliancy. Can anything be more captivating than the dewy softness and sparkle of the eyes of a newly awakened bride? It may be for a time, but the brilliant clearness of the eye shows quickly; and this can as well exist in the adult who properly studies and cares for the fair window of her soul.

A dainty lamp shade is in two or three thick-nesses of French tissue paper in a butterfly-like form, folded and creased to give it the desired effect. Small puckers of the center thick-ness both at the neck and edge gives it the effect of rose frillings; and it is as exquisitely fresh, pretty as an affair as one can find. Another which was more effective at a recent tea, was of paper roses of a delicate pink, studded all over the porcelain shade making a most harmonious ornament.

Quite a number of Atlantians will spend the summer abroad, visiting the most noted and interesting cities of the old world. Mr. Barrett, who sailed the 3d of July for a nine weeks trip, will take a large party, of whose members are Atlanta people. His route, through Liverpool, London, Antwerp, Brussels, Waterloo, Cologne, the Rhine, Wiesbaden, Frankfurt, Nuremberg, Munich, Ober Ammergau, the Danube, Vienna, through the Tyrol, Venice, Florence, Milan, Como, Bellagio, the Italian lakes, the St. Gotthard Pass, Lucerne, ascent of the Rigi, the Brunig Pass, Interlaken, the Grindelwald Glacier, Berne, Paris and Havre.

Mrs. Ballard's and Miss Mabel's party will sail a week later, the 10th of July, remaining three months. They will visit Queenstown, Liverpool, Chester, Leamington, Kenilworth, Stratford-on-Avon, London, Antwerp, Brussels, Cologne, the Rhine, Wiesbaden, Frankfurt, Heidelberg, Black Forest, Falt of the Rhine, Schaffhausen, Zurich, Lucerne, Rigi, Brunig Pass, Interlaken, Stanzbach Falls, Berne, Lausanne, Lake Lemano, Castle of Chillon, Tete Noire Pass, Chamounix, Mer de Glace, St. Gervais, Aix-les-Bains, Mt. Cervin, Turin, Geneva, Pisa, Rome, Naples, Vesuvius, Pompeii, Florence, Venice, Milan, Lake Maggiore, St. Gothard tunnel, Andermatt, Devil's bridge, Bale, Paris. They will remain two weeks in London, two in Paris, and one week at Interlaken; and the entire trip will not be hurried. A number of Atlanta people are to be members of their party, which will comprise not more than twelve.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Lowe, and Mrs. H. H. Smith are among those who will travel abroad, irrespective of any settled route.

A pretty table for a breakfast has its center crystal bowl filled with maiden hair fern, branches of the feathery asparagus and tall white lilies. Smaller bowls of delicate flowers are at each corner. A fringe of damask flowers, the snowy whiteness of the damask. Radiating from the central floral piece are ribbons of the palest water lily green, with fringed ends, which extend to each corner, crossing the table in a graceful fashion. Another pretty idea is that of having in the center a great block of ice, over which creep trailing vines, and in niches cut for the purpose, are seen a variety of tempting fruits. The latest novelty in name cards consists of a scarf of India silk, or a broad ribbon of satin, on which in gilt letters is the name of the guest.

Mrs. John B. Barrett, of Wytheville, Virginia, the mother of the Rev. Mr. Barrett of St. Luke's cathedral, will be the guest of her son for several weeks.

Miss Genevieve West, one of Lucy Cobb's last term graduates, will spend the summer traveling in Europe. She sails with a party of friends about the first of July from New York.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Webster have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Lena Webster, to Mr. J. M. Harrison, of Columbus. The ceremony will be performed at their residence, No. 34 Hood street, at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, April 30th.

The Catinion of last week, the last of the series for the summer, was thoroughly enjoyable. The ball-room had been beautifully decorated and the handsome costumes added much to the beauty of the surroundings. At twelve supper was served from daintily appointed tables. The ladies present were: Miss Halford, Washington, D. C., Miss Spelman, New Orleans, Miss Moore, Mobile, Miss Grant, Miss Marshall, Miss Harwood, Miss Bell, Miss Orme, Miss Mand Clark, Miss Joan Clark, Miss Barnett, Miss Crane, Miss Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. James Freeman, Mrs. Edward Barnes and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. John Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Will Speer, Governor and Mrs. Bullock, Mrs. Jones and Miss Closen, Post McPherson, Messrs. Tom Cobb Jackson, John Grant, Tom Erwin, Charles Crankshaw, T. B. Paine, Lewis Redwine, Peter Grant, Frank Block, Joe Edgewood, Sam Hall, Major Comings, Dr. Frank Stockton, Lieutenants Bethel, Martin and Kenley, Post McPherson, Julius Brown, Harvey Johnson, Quintard Peters, Vol Bullock, Robert H. Jones, of New York; Hartridge, of Savannah, and others.

Yesterday morning at 5 o'clock a number of northside little ones had a delightful design. There were in the party Masters Robert Fowler Hemphill, Austell Thornton, and Bessie Steele, Misses May Goldsmith, Julia Hemphill, Emma Hemphill, Pauline Gray, Louise Dibble, and Lulu Belle Hemphill, with faithful back. Brown as driver. The ride to the woods was one of merriment, the crisp morning air having fine effect upon the lively children. The round of flower gathering was full of fun. The wagon was profusely arrayed in dogwood, honeysuckle, violets and other wild flowers for the return trip. It was a pretty sight to see peeping among the flowers the bright rose faces of the young participants in this, the earliest flower carnival of the season.

Last evening a party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Courtney, Mr. and Mrs. John Courtney, and their son, Master Jack, the Misses Courtney, Tina and Julia Hammond, and Messrs. Harry Scott, Elmer Brown and Cliff Jones, left in a special car for Little Rock, Ark., where they go to the wedding of Mr. Dick Courtney, which will occur on Wednesday evening of this week.

Miss Hightower will have as her guest for several weeks Miss Chaffee, of New Orleans, who is well known to Atlantians as one of New Orleans's leading society belles. Miss Hightower is certainly very fortunate in her guests. The charms of the Misses Matthews are still spoken of, and in Miss Chaffee, Atlanta society will receive a most delightful addition, since she is remarkably handsome and clever.

Colonel and Mrs. Felix Cornut, of Cave Springs, have issued invitations to the celebration of their silver wedding at their home on Wednesday evening, the thirtieth. Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Cornut, all over Georgia, will join in congratulating them and wishing them many happy returns of their wedding day.

A pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Jennie Schindler last evening by a large number of her friends. The evening was spent in dancing and various amusements, after which an elegant supper was served.

Mr. W. A. Glenn, of Macon, was in the city yesterday.

The Rev. J. K. Reese, who succeeds the Rev. Mr. Winchester, of the Episcopal church in Macon, passed through the city on Friday with his four little daughters.

Mrs. E. B. Brooks, of Elyria, Ohio, is visiting her sister, Mrs. R. H. Davis, at No. 13 Baltimore place.

Mrs. Woodson left yesterday with her sister, Mrs. Foster, to spend some time with her in Madison.

Mrs. E. W. Martin left yesterday to attend the marriage of her sister at Woodbury.

Mrs. F. Hester, of Monroe, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Abbott, on Washington street.

Mrs. Meyer and her daughter, of Crawford, Ga., are visiting Mrs. Colonel Brandt, on Washington street.

Mrs. Cleckley has returned to her home in Augusta after a pleasant visit to Mrs. Dr. Woolley, on Washington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Poppenheim have returned from Cincinnati, where they went to attend the fortieth anniversary of the wedding of their parents.

Mr. W. H. Hulbert, of the Southern Express company, is confined to his room, on Washington street, from the accident on the Gainesville and Jug Tavern railroad on last Friday.

Miss Fieta Trammell, of Marietta, daughter of Commissioner Colonel L. N. Trammell, is visiting her sister, Mrs. George Morris, in Birmingham.

Mrs. C. F. Marshall is visiting relatives and friends at Gainesville, Ga.

Miss Abbie Smith, of Greenville, S. C., is visiting friends on 60 Highland avenue.

Miss Little Williams is visiting her old home, Washington, Ga.

The Rev. Mr. Hudgins, of Rome, spent several days in the city last week.

Mr. Isam Daniel is in New Orleans for a few days.

TALKING OF HER VISIT.

Miss Lindley Tells of Her Trip to Boston in the Interests of Physical Culture.

Last Friday morning at the Ladies' gymnasium Miss Lindley gave a most entertaining account of her visit to Boston, where she attended the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Physical Education. She was accompanied by Miss Isabelle Roach of the Normal class, and they have both returned full of new ideas in regard to the work, and with plenty of enthusiasm for putting them into practice. They visited all the gymnasia in Boston and returned with a great deal of information in this profession in the country.

Miss Lindley's description of the different gymnasia of course roused a spirit of rivalry in the hearts of all the ladies present whenever she spoke of anything that was an improvement on ours, but a general look of satisfaction came over the faces of all whenever she said that the Atlanta school came up to the standard of the best in the country. Miss Lindley said, was only entered upon in America within the last eight or ten years, but now it is a recognized feature of general education; so much so that in our best schools and colleges, particularly those for women, the students are required to pass a regular examination on the subject. With such men as Dr. Sargent, of Harvard, Dr. Anderson, of Brooklyn, Dr. Hendell, of John Hopkins, at the head of the profession, there is no doubt of its advancement on all sides. The very best physical culture, she observed, is greatly in favor of the movement, and even if they were not, there is so much good sense in it, that it is bound to come to the top.

Miss Lindley particularly enjoyed meeting Dr. Charles Enchuske, of Stockholm. He was her teacher during her normal year, and she took great pleasure in having what extra lessons from him she could in the short time spent with him, besides getting a great many suggestions as to the work.

Dr. Enchuske is now at the Boston School of Physical culture, where he is paid $300 a month for conducting work, five hours a week. His salary being paid by a Miss Hemenway, of Boston, who also built the Hemenway gymnasium of Harvard college. Dr. Enchuske also conducts a school of physical culture in Brooklyn. He brought what is known as the Ling or Swedish system to this country. It is the most eligible for public school work. Dr. Enchuske is, no doubt, the greatest authority in his line of work in this country. He considers gymnastic work in two divisions—educational and medical—each to be based on progression, and admits athletics and games only so far as they are systematic and brought to be of advantage to health; while Dr. Luther Gulick, of the Springfield School of Christian Workers, divides it into three classes—educative, curative and recreative. In New York the ladies visited the Berkeley academy, where Dr. William Anderson is in charge. Miss Lindley found herself, home, and Miss Roach as a member of the Atlanta normal class, received a most flattering welcome from the Berkeley school.

They also visited Miss Mabel Jenness's school in New York, but her system is mainly aesthetic, dancing, music, etc., etc., not so much attention being given to health culture as in the other schools. Miss Lindley particularly spoke of the beautiful feeling she saw there.

The attendance at the association was large, and great interest was shown, not only by those engaged in the work, but also by the best mental educators and others.

We were glad to hear what a welcome the association of the Atlanta school, placing it at once among the first in the country, and the normal class should feel flattered at the many encouraging and complimentary messages sent them by the very leaders of the association.

Miss Lindley feels every encouragement in regard to her work here, and is planning to devote herself to its enlargement next year. She wishes particularly to add a mothers' class, the aim of which will be to discuss the best methods of health preservation for the little ones. She is hoping also to make better arrangements of gymnastic conveniences, and altogether expects to have greater success in the future than in the past. The Atlanta school has won a high place for itself, and every effort will be made for its advancement.

The normal class expect soon to welcome here Miss Lindley, who is a graduate of Dr. Sargent's school, in Boston. She comes to take advantage of the excellent course of lectures given here to the normals.

The Atlanta school will also soon have an opportunity of seeing Dr. Hendell, of John Hopkins, who came to Atlanta in the winter to see the progress the work has made in the south.

Y. M. C. A.

The annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian association will take place next Tuesday evening, the 23d. The programme will consist of election of officers, short talks from the delegates who recently visited the state convention at Augusta, refreshments by a committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and a general reunion among the members. All members only specially invited.

State Sunday School Convention.

The seventeenth annual convention of the Georgia State Sunday School association will convene at Thomasville on Tuesday evening, April 23d, and continue throughout Wednesday and Thursday. A number of the most distinguished orators in the south are on the programme for addresses. Among those best known we notice the following: Rev. H. H. Hurd, of New York; Hugh R. Walker, Rev. Dr. Thirkield, Hon. J. M. Freeman, of Waycross; Hon. A. J. Russell, of Tallahassee; Mrs. M. G. Kennedy, of Philadelphia; and the Baptist Sunday school publications: Rev. William Shaw, southern secretary Sunday Union, and several others.

The Central railroad will run a solid Sunday school train direct to Thomasville, leaving the main passenger depot on April 23d, at 7 o'clock in the morning, arriving at Thomasville at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, returning on Friday morning, May 2d. Tickets will be on sale on the 23d and 24th, good to return up to May 6th.

Fare for round trip only $1.15.
All delegates who send their names to J. C. Kimball, No. 3 North Broad street, Atlanta, will be entertained free by the good people of the "city among the pines."

There ought to be at least one hundred delegates from this country.

Thomasville is a lovely city, and the trip will be delightful and the convention a grand one. All schools are earnestly requested to appoint delegates on Sunday, the 23th.

Resolutions.

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our late brother John H. Jensen, and

Whereas, The intimate relations long held by our deceased brother with the members of this company render it imperative that we should place on record our appreciation of his services as a fellow-member of this company.

Resolved, By Atlanta Life Company No. 1, that while we bow with humble submission to the decree of the Most High, nevertheless, we deeply mourn the loss of our brother.

Resolved, That in the death of John H. Jensen this company loses a brother who has always been a member and a leader in the discharge of his duties, and prompt to advance the interests of this company, an honorable, upright man whose qualities endeared him to his brother members, but to all his fellow-citizens.

Resolved, That this company tender its heartfelt sympathy to the family and relatives of our deceased brother in this sad hour of affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered on the minutes of the company, and that a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother, also published in the city papers.

A WEALTH OF FLOWERS

IN WHICH THE LADIES OF ATLANTA WILL BE INTERESTED.

Some Interesting Facts about the Spring Fashions in Bonnets—Small Ones the Craze.

The craze of the day as regards headgear is for bonnets of a diminutive description. So far the preference has been given to violets. Sometimes it is a scrapping lace with a bunch of purple violets on one side. Sometimes a wreath of violets with no crown at all, but most frequently the whole crown, made flat to the head is covered with Parma violets, while a bow of ribbon—matching in hue is placed erect at the back of the bonnet. Violets threaten in a few weeks to be "mal portees" and it was told the other day by Madame Groskuth (the leading milliner at the Surprise Store) that several of her best customers had already declined to be seen wearing the favorite blossom. Its place will be taken by other spring flowers, especially lilacs, hyacinths and cowslips.

In Brooklyn, at the gymnasium of the Adelphi academy, where Dr. William Anderson is in charge, Miss Lindley found herself, home, and Miss Roach as a member of the Atlanta normal class, received a most flattering welcome from the Berkeley school.

They also visited Miss Mabel Jenness's school in New York, but her system is mainly aesthetic, dancing, music, etc., etc., not so much attention being given to health culture as in the other schools. Miss Lindley particularly spoke of the beautiful feeling she saw there.

REMEMBER OUR BIG

Silk and Dress Goods Sale This Week!

We are out of those 9 1/4c Ginghams we have been selling for 3 1/4c, but to keep up the fun and make the mill turn fast, we have taken from stock 4,802 yards of 11 1/4c Ginghams and marked them at 3 5/8. This is like giving these goods away, but we have opened the season.

WE KNOW HOW TO BUY.

For this week's sale we will sell 1 case of loom lengths of white plaid Organdies, in lengths of 2 1/2 up to 10 yards at 3 1/4c, not to be matched for less than 12 1/2c.
